We had the opportunity to name an aircraft carrier in his honor. As a matter of fact, the legislation for the naming of that carrier—while I had a hand in recommending it, along with many others—passed the Appropriations Committee over which the Presiding Officer is the chairman. It is one of the few times that this body has specifically acted to name a ship in honor of one of its Members.

John Stennis served for many years on the Senate Armed Services Committee and on the Senate Appropriations Committee. All of us have cherished memories for that great Senator.

On this occasion, the Vice President of the United States, which I thought was most fitting, came down and delivered a message on behalf of himself and President Clinton. Vice President GORE, of course, served on the Armed Services Committee with Senator Stennis for some several years prior to becoming Vice President of the United States.

We also were joined on this occasion by my colleague from Mississippi, Senator THAD COCHRAN. Senator COCHRAN, in many ways, has humbly assumed the mantle of graciousness and dignity that John Stennis carried forth in this Chamber for so many years.

Senator COCHRAN spoke most eloquently about Senator Stennis and his contributions to America's body of laws and how he unselfishly served not only his State but the Nation in a true bipartisan fashion, particularly as it relates to national defense.

Senator ROBB, my colleague from Virginia, and I also had the privilege of speaking at this particular occasion.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD today the statements of several—including the Vice President of the United States—who spoke at the launching of the John C. Stennis in Newport News, VA a short time ago.

There being no objection, the statements were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF SENATOR JOHN WARNER

Mr. President, on Veterans Day, November 11, 1993, I had the honor and privilege of participating in an event which was of great personal significance to me—the christening of our newest aircraft carrier, the U.S.S. John M. Stennis.

Vice President Al Gore delivered the keynote address at that event, and I would like to take this opportunity to share his eloquent and moving remarks with my colleagues. Recognizing John Stennis' half century of service to his country, the Vice President pointed out that the carrier's namesake was devoted to the welfare of America's armed forces members in peace and in war.

Also present at this very moving tribute to a great man was my friend and colleague, the Senator from Mississippi, Senator Cochran. Representing the Stennis family, he stated that "no finer tribute could be paid to its namesake than for a ship to sail safely on the seas, as a force for peace and stability in a troubled world, a symbol of strength, honor and rectitude." I would also like to share the full remarks of the Senator from Mississippi with my colleagues today.

Mr. President, it was my privilege to encourage the naming of the U.S.S. Stennis in honor of a man for whom I have the greatest admiration, respect and affection. He was, and is, a giant among men whose record of achievement speaks for itself. I can think of no more fitting tribute to John Stennis and this. As I stated during the ceremony, "A carrier, to me, is a symbol of America's commitment to deter oppression. It's an island of freedom proudly bearing the stamp, 'Made in the United States of America.'"

REMARKS OF SENATOR THAD COCHRAN

Thank you, Mr. Phillips. This is a very good day to be a Mississippian. We are all proud to have been represented in the United States Senate by John Cornelius Stennis.

As he is honored today in this special way, we feel honored, too.

When he was elected to the Senate on November 4, 1947, one newspaper editor in our state wrote:

"Mississippi has made a wise choice. It has elected a thoughtful, purposeful, and high-minded man to the United States Senate. He is not afraid of hard work and his ability to form lasting friendships will stand him in good stead in Washington. In his election, the State has well earned the plaudits of the Nation."

This proved to be a prophetic assessment of the newest Senator. When he retired from the Senate 41 years and 2 months later, the accolades and tributes from his colleagues were persuasive evidence of the respect he had earned during his illustrious Senate career.

Senator Robert Byrd of West Virginia said, "His career has been marked by integrity, honesty, character, devotion, and leadership."

Senator Pete Domenici of New Mexico said, "* * * He is a very special man, who came to serve when America needed a special man * * * Senator Stennis, we may miss you, but we will never forget you."

Senator Fritz Hollings of South Carolina said, "* * * as a role model and as an inspiration, John Stennis is very special to us. Especially in recent years, we have admired his courage and his tenacity. He will always be a man of the Senate—an institution that has been ennobled and elevated by his presence."

Senator Bob Dole of Kansas said, "Senator Stennis is one of a kind. And one of the characteristics that sets him apart in his vision of duty and responsibility. 'I want to plow a straight furrow,' Senator Stennis once said, 'right down to the end of my row.' There is no question that John Stennis has achieved that goal—and much, much more."

Those of us from Mississippi know from our unique, close relationship with him, that these observations of his fellow Senators describe Senator Stennis well. As his Senate colleague for ten years it was a great honor to work at his side, to learn from him, and to have the benefit of his friendship and his example.

It is particularly appropriate that this ship be named for Senator Stennis. A member of the Senate Armed Services Committee for 36 years, and Chairman for twelve, he was also Chairman of the Defense Subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Chairman of the full committee. With this combination of assignments and his leadership ability, Senator John Stennis was more responsible than anyone for the United States Navy's nuclear carrier fleet. in 1982, he was the key to the funding for the CVN-72, U.S.S. Abraham Lincoln, and CVN-73, U.S.S. George Washington. And in 1987, he was the driving force behind Congress providing funds for two more of these superb ships, CVN-74, John C. Stennis, and CVN-75, United States.

When our Defense Appropriations Subcommittee approved funding for CVN's 74 and 75, we cast a unanimous vote to urge that this ship be named for Senator Stennis. As subcommittee Chairman, however, he would not entertain the motion. His modesty and his influence prevailed until the legislation reached the floor, and on December 11, 1987, the Senate unanimously passed the resolution which brought us here today.

I am confident that it will be an honor and an inspiration to those who will serve on this ship to be guided by the ideals and the tradition of John C. Stennis.

No finer tribute could be paid to its namestake than for this ship to sail safely on the seas, as a force for peace and stability in a troubled world, a symbol of strength, honor and rectitude. He would be very proud.

REMARKS BY VICE PRESIDENT AL GORE

Thank you, Secretary Dalton. That was a gracious introduction.

And on behalf of President Clinton, thank you for your leadership since being confirmed in July.

Senator Robb, Senator Cochran, Congressmen Bateman, Scott Sisisky, Admiral Kelso, Mr. Mead, Mr. Phillips, Mrs. Womble, family and friends of Senator John Stennis, and fellow veterans.

Good afternoon.

One of the first recorded descriptions of the launching of an American naval vessel was that of the frigate Raleigh, in May, 1776.

One account said of the Raleigh, "She is esteemed by all those who are judges that have seen her, to be one of the compleatest ships ever built in America. The unwearied diligence and care of the three Master builders * * * and the good order and industry of the Carpenters, deserve particular notice."

Today we christen the Navy's seventh Nimitz Class nuclear carrier. We don't build ships out of wood anymore. But this warship has a lot in common with the Raleigh.

She too is one of the "compleatest" ships ever built in America. All the people who worked on her deserve equal praise as the Masterbuilders and carpenters who labored in Colonial America.

And like the Raleigh, she is designed to provide maritime superiority and meet our national security interests into the next century.

It's appropriate, too, that we name her after one of the Masterbuilders of America's national security strategy: Senator John Stennis. I wish he could be here today. And it's a real pleasure for me to share this day with his daughter, Margaret Stennis Womble.

John Stennis took office in the Senate a few months before I was born. He served with my father. He served with me. And he always commanded tremendous respect for his fairness, integrity and expertise. He worked diligently and tenaciously to forge a bipartisan consensus during the difficult years in which he served. He championed a number of significant weapons systems, including—of course—the Nimitz Class Aircraft Carrier.

He understood clearly that robust military power is essential to support diplomacy.

The U.S.S. Stennis will be mobile, agile, precise and flexible. It'll be well suited to operate in regions of the world where the United States continues to have vital strategic and economic interests.

Like her namesake, she will support democracy through active American involvement, just as other aircraft carriers do today, whether on station in the Adriatic where they are helping enforce the no-fly in Bosnia—to the Horn of Africa where they support U.S. and U.N. forces deployed in Somalia, and in the Western Pacific as well.

Now, in addition to his leadership in military issues, John Stennis was an outspoken champion of the millions of Americans who serve or have served in our armed forces.

This is the day we honor America's veterans. And so in addition to honoring John Stennis we must also honor those who have defended America and her Allies. Many of them lost their lives to preserve freedom and democracy. We need to remember those who have served—and recognize the sacrifices of those who serve today.

Most of you in this audience share with me a first hand understanding of the challenges and uncertainties of life in the armed services.

Sailors and marines are deployed today throughout the world on 174 of our warships. They are participating in 14 bilateral defense exercises. Soldiers and airmen are on watch world-wide from Korea to Latin America, Europe and the Middle East. These professionals stand their watch to ensure that no rival power arises to threaten the United States or our vital allies.

They make an enormous contribution. They help nurture democracy. They tip the scales of history in favor of free peoples around the world.

Clearly, there are uncertainties and anxieties as we rightsize our armed forces for the next century. But President Clinton and I are determined that our power projection forces—exemplified by this magnificent ship and her experienced crew—will be second to none.

They'll be the best trained forces in the world. The best equipped forces in the world, the most combat-ready military forces in the world.

The President is committed to a defense budget that balances the need for economic revitalization at home and our need to protect America's vital interest, expand democracy and encourage free markets abroad.

In the short term, the national security of the United States is protected by military power. In the long run, though, it also requires economic power.

For this reason, economic security is an essential underpinning of President Clinton's national security strategy.

Much of what's right about America's economic prowess is exemplified by the technological sophistication of Newport News shipbuilding.

It's a national asset. Each time you've delivered one of the twenty-six aircraft carriers built here you've made yourselves more of a national asset. Each time you deliver a Nimitz Class aircraft carrier ahead of schedule—as you do each time—you show us that in our effort to make government work better we should look to you for examples.

Now that the Cold War is over, the shipbuilding industry faces a new challenge. American shipbuilders must transfer their technical skills from the military to the commercial market.

The Clinton Administration will help. After all, expanding the commercial capabilities of U.S. shipyards helps maintain the defense industrial base, strengthen American exports and ensure a steady stream of high technology jobs for American workers.

On October 1, the President delivered a five point plan to Congress designed to do just that. It includes an initiative to ensure a level international playing field in the shipbuilding industry. It aims to improve the international competitiveness of American shipyards. It eliminates unnecessary government regulation. It helps with loan guarantees and international marketing.

The President's plan will supply important assistance for this talented work force here at Newport News—and in other shipyards around the country.

And now it is time for that part of this ceremony whose origins are almost as old as recorded history—certainly as old as the ancient Greeks, who launched ships by drinking wine to honor the gods and poured water on the new vessel to bless it.

The English used to use a large loving cup filled with wine. After it was gone they would throw it overboard and whoever retrieved it, kept it.

I think its interesting that after a while this got too expensive and they would use a net to catch the cup and reuse it—an early recycling program. The first description we have of an American christening is that of Constitution—Old Ironsides. Her sponsor stood on the weather deck at the bow and as she moved into the water, broke a bottle of fine old madeira over the heel of the bowsprit.

It's good to look back at these traditions because they remind us that while there is much in our ships that are new, our tradition and ideals remain as constant as the stars.

Mrs. Womble, President Clinton asked me to give you this letter addressed to your father. It expresses the President's appreciation for your father's near half century of service in the United States Senate.

When the U.S.S. John C. Stennis joins the Fleet in several years, Captain Klosterman and his crew will know their ship's namesake was devoted to them and their welfare in peace and war.

And they will know that just as Americans did with those who served on the old Raleigh or Constitution so long ago, we will always honor their sacrifice, their patriotism and their bravery.

APPRECIATION TO ALL

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I also would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to the many persons who make possible the daily operations of the U.S. Senate. They range all the way from the telephone operators to Capitol Hill police, food service employees, and, of course, most significantly those who are present in the Chamber with us serving in a variety of very important functions on a daily basis every time the Senate convenes and, indeed, during those periods when it is not in session, they are making preparations for the next session.

I express my appreciation to all. I thank the Sergeant at Arms employees who respond to numerous requests at all times of the day and night. Also, the Secretary of the Senate's office which oversees the operation of the vital administrative departments in the Senate. There are innumerable individuals who are here and present and serving loyally year after year in order that we can carry forth with our responsibilities as legislators.

I would like to single out—I have taken a particular interest in them, as a member of the Rules Committee for some many years—those who provide for the beautification of the gardens and the trees that surround this, the most beautiful Capitol in the entire world. It is done under the supervision of the Architect of the Capitol, Mr. White, who has served with great distinction for so many years.

Every time I drive up to Capitol Hill I am inspired by the magnificence of the architecture of this great structure that stands for the symbol of freedom, not only in this country but throughout the world.

I thank those who toil and labor, be it on the gardens or in the Halls, to make possible this institution, not only for those who come here as Senators or Members of Congress but for the millions of visitors who come and enjoy their Capitol each year, and indeed many from abroad who come to enjoy it and share it with us and return home, hopefully, with a greater inspiration for freedom.

Last, I thank those quiet masters of syntax, rhetoric, and grammar who meet the challenge of preparing this daily RECORD.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HATFIELD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon is recognized for not to exceed 10 minutes.

THE WILL OF THE SENATE

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I do not intend to take 10 minutes.

I first want to thank the Senator from Virginia for both of his comments, one relating to the former Secretary of the Navy, Senator CHAFEE—and I would also take note that Senator WARNER also is a former Secretary of the Navy—explaining why Senator CHAFEE would be going to Guadalcanal.

I only mentioned that because I, too, was in Guadalcanal at a later time, somewhat less than a month or two after Senator CHAFEE had landed in Guadalcanal. So it elicits very interesting memories on my part. Also his comments about Senator Stennis, our long-time, beloved colleague. It was my privilege, as well as that of the Senator from West Virginia, the President pro tempore of the Senate, in the chair for the moment, to serve with him on the Senate Appropriations Committee. Early on in my Senate career I saw the Senator from Mississippi as certainly one of the role models that I wanted to study and wanted to emulate.

I want to return to just one final comment on the Brady bill, as I trust our leadership is now moving to at least make one more valiant effort to try to resolve this issue. Again, I want to focus on the importance of our leadership in the institution of the Senate. We oftentimes make reference to this aisle as the dividing line between Democrats on one side and Republicans on the other side. I have noticed the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, the President pro tempore of the Senate, oftentimes, when making a point, will move into the aisle. I have studied the Senator from West Virginia over the years, as a role model. I think oftentimes that is very important symbolism—to indicate that what I am saying, what I am representing, really does not just apply to one side of the aisle or the other because great legislation takes both sides to move in some kind of compromise and accord.

But let me also say that as we think of the leadership role in the Senate, I am convinced that criticisms of the Senator from Kansas, the Republican minority leader, Senator DOLE regarding what may be interpreted or reported as technicalities that have less desire to resolve and accomplish a purpose than to delay are without merit. Because I believe that the so-called technicalities as they have been referred to are very fundamental issues and principles that the Republican leader has represented from our side of the aisle.

Just a while ago we pointed out one of those. That was on this instant check. There are those on both sides of the aisle who are not supportive of this. The Republican leader is. He indicated that just a few moments ago in the small colloquy that we had. Therefore, I do not believe we should in any way indicate that the leader on either side is using procedure either to delay resolving this issue or to become an obstacle to its ultimate resolution.

I know the Republican leader. I have worked with the Republican leader. And I have had the privilege of working with the Democratic leader. The President pro tempore is very aware that in the first part of this session on the so-called jobs bill we engaged in much discussion back and forth, back and forth across the aisle, attempting to work out some kind of a compromise, some kind of a resolution of that. And I have had other experiences with the Democratic leader, the Senator from Maine, and I know that his positions and his statements are certainly made in an effort to be representative of his side and at the same time of the entire institution of the Senate to resolve the issues.

So I do not think there is any less than good faith on both sides of our leadership. But let me also say when you get out beyond the beltway the average person, in my view and my experience only—I am stating now my own perspective—does not see this center aisle. They may even not be aware of this center aisle. I have brought visitors here on the floor, as I am sure all of my colleagues have, and pointed out, "Here is the Democratic leader and here is the Republican leader and here are the Republicans." They say, "Oh, you sit on different sides of the Chamber?" Sort of a new bit of information. It is not necessarily trivia at all but just something they are not aware of. What they are looking at is the institution of the Senate. They are not looking at D's and R's.

Let me say, if we do not pass this Brady bill, in my view, the public will criticize the Congress, not the Democrats or the Republicans more than the other, nor the House more than the Senate, nor the Senate more than the House. They will just say, "That is the Congress."

Let me say in any opinion poll I have seen, we do not have that many points of approval to waste. In this particular instance it will be even more difficult. And at the risk of being a bit redundant, when they see the vast margins by which both Chambers on a bipartisan basis passed the bill and then passed the report on the House side, which is now pending on the Senate side, they are going to have less ability or desire to try to pinpoint blame. They will just create the whole criticism and make "the Congress" the target of their disfavor, in my view.

Mr. LEAHY. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Will the Senator not agree with me that it is probably safe to say the majority of our colleagues, whether they are for or against the Brady bill, would agree with the Senator from Oregon that the time has come?

Mr. HATFIELD. Yes.

Mr. LEAHY. The time has come to say, "Enough." Senators have had their chance to say why they are for or against it. Senators have had their chance to go on record either for or against it.

Mr. HATFIELD. Yes.

Mr. LEAHY. And, for the good of the institution, but also out of a sense of responsibility to the American people, it is time to complete this once and for all.

The Senator and I have been on opposite sides of this particular issue. But I think we can agree, and I think we can say most of our colleagues, Republicans and Democrats alike, agree that it is time to end this. It is time to complete this legislation and head home.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Vermont, my good colleague and fellow Member of the Appropriations Committee. All three Members on the floor at this moment have worked with each other in many roles, but particularly on the Appropriations Committee.

I point out again the very point the Senator from Vermont makes. He is from the Democratic side of the aisle. I am from the Republican side of the aisle. The Senator from Vermont, a Democrat, voted against the Brady bill. I, a Republican from Oregon, voted for the Brady bill. Yet we feel at this moment that the institution, the will of the institution, must prevail. The majority of the people of this institution, by a vote of 63 to 36, said they wanted the Brady bill. The Senator from Vermont was on the losing side. I was on the winning side. But together we say "the institution" should prevail at this moment.

I see the Senator, my good friend from West Virginia, the President pro tempore of the Senate, who has written this fabulous history of the Senate. One of those persons he most admired, as I have most admired, was Senator Richard Russell of Georgia. I was fortunate to be here—just my first 2 years—when the Senator from Georgia was still here. I have so many fond memories.

In those days, unlike today, freshman Senators listened for a period of time before they chose to speak. Then when they did, they put some effort into what we call our "maiden speech" on the floor of the Senate. As a junior Senator from the far West, I came to the floor on a particular day to make my maiden speech. The Senator from Georgia, Senator Russell, was not in good health at that time. He often found it difficult to expend the energy required.

Yet, I remember seeing him start out this center aisle to leave the floor from having committed a bill, or whatever it was; he saw me rise to ask for recognition; that Senator from Georgia, Senator Russell, turned right around, came back and sat down. I believe he sat in the seat the Senator from West Virginia now occupies, and sat there as if enthralled by what I was saying to give me his full attention. I think he was the only Member on the floor at that time.

I do not recite that except to illustrate the point that he had a sense of the institution. He was opposed to every civil rights bill that came along, as I recall, and he fought those civil rights bills with all the rules of the Senate at his command. But when the cloture was put down, his statement was: "I have had my day. I have had my full rights as a Senator. Now the Senate must work its will."

I know few people, since Senator Russell—and the Senator from West Virginia is one of them—who has the understanding of the duality, if I can simplify it, the duality of our roles that we are to represent the people of our State, but we also have the national perspective and the national interests, as our Founding Fathers intended the Senate to represent. Therefore, in that sense, we have to come to the point of letting the Senate work its will as an institution on behalf of a national interest, as against perhaps our own parochial or our individual State interests.

I think we have come to that place because, in my view, the ultimate harm or hurt or criticism is going to fall on the institution rather than the individual Senators who may be ferreted out by interest groups on both sides of this issue, perhaps in the next elections. But immediately it is going to be the institution that passed a bill 63 to 36 on one side and 238 to 189 on the other side, and yet it did not become law. That to me is hurtful to the institution.

I think it is illustrated again by the presence of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. LEAHY] saying the institution at this moment should prevail in its will.

I only make that point, because as far as our leadership is concerned—both sides—and as far as the institution is concerned, besides my own personal view of supporting the Brady bill, I hope to see a quick resolution to this.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of no quorum having been suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, and Members of the Senate, we are very near to a conclusion of this matter one way or the other. We are now awaiting a response from our colleagues with respect to the last proposal. I expect that to occur shortly, and I will then have an announcement to make.

Accordingly, I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 11:40 a.m., recessed subject to the call of the Chair; whereupon, at 1:39 p.m., the Senate reassembled when called to order by the President of the Senate [Mr. GORE].

The VICE PRESIDENT. The majority leader.

BRADY HANDGUN VIOLENCE PREVENTION ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator DOLE's bill, which he shall have until 4 p.m. today to introduce, making amendments to the Brady bill, be placed directly on the calendar; that the majority leader, after consultation with the Republican leader, may turn to its consideration at any time; that when the bill is considered, it be under a time limitation of 4 hours equally divided in the usual form; that no amendments or motions be in order to the bill; that the bill be modified with the consent of the two leaders; that at the conclusion or yielding back of time, the Senate, without any intervening action or debate, vote on passage of the bill; that the Senate now proceed to consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 1025, the Brady bill; that the conference report be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Republican leader.

Mr. DOLE. Reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, but I think it might be well before the agreement that we have some exchange on what will happen.

We will have a bill by 4 o'clock. I assume if it is a few minutes after that, it is not fatal. They are working on it. The legislative counsel faxed it to us. We need to go over it carefully.

Second, I have talked with the Speaker. I understand members of our staff and the majority have had conversations with Congressman SCHUMER. We also had conversations with Congressman BROOKS. And the President indicated he will sign it. The Speaker agreed to consider the bill under a closed rule in the House. It will be dealt with expeditiously. We did not give any time. It will be my hope we do not put a date in it to complete action or disposition of the bill I will introduce before the February recess. I think we can work that out with the leaders.

The agreement also contains a provision that we can modify the amendment with the agreement of the two leaders. Obviously, we are not going to do anything unless there is a technical modification or some mistake in drafting. We do not intend to put the Republican health care bill—which is not a bad idea—in there as an amendment. But in any event, it will be relevant and it will be cleared by the majority leader.

I think, based on that, after we get the agreement, I would like to make a brief statement. But first I congratulate the majority leader and members of his staff and Members on his side of the aisle—Senator METZENBAUM is flying back from Cleveland, I understand—and also my staff and my colleagues on this side, because I could not have done this had I not been able to get consent from everybody on this side of the aisle. I have not talked to everybody, but I talked to key people on this side of the aisle. I can say that there is no objection to the majority leader's request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? Hearing none, the request is granted and the conference report is agreed to.

So the conference report was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The majority leader.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I thank the Republican leader for his courtesy and cooperation. We have been negotiating on this issue off and on for 2½ years. I think that while there are many people who will be pleased that it has been enacted, no one is more pleased than we are if for no other reason than the issue is now largely behind us. I thank him for his usual courtesy in discussing the matter. It has been a very lengthy and tedious negotiation.

Second, we have agreed to give the Republican leader until 4 p.m. today to introduce the bill, to which we have already agreed to have it brought up with no amendments and a vote because we do act in good faith and we know that it is going to be a bill that is consistent with the points that we have been discussing.

So I want to say to those of my colleagues who, having heard this order, raise a question that we have agreed to a very expedited procedure on a bill we have not seen, that although we have not seen the bill, we know essentially what is going to be in it.

Third, I said privately to the Republican leader a moment ago, there are many ironies in this situation, not least of which are the following two: We have just now ended a lengthy filibuster, and the price of ending the filibuster was that we had to agree to bring up a bill and not filibuster it. That is here in the Senate. In the House, the Republicans regularly criticize the Speaker for bringing up bills under a closed rule, and yet here the Republicans have demanded that the bill be brought up under a closed rule.

All of us here, whose words and actions are recorded regularly, meet ourselves coming around the corner. Rarely does it happen that two of them have come around the corner in such close time and proximity. But, frankly, Mr. President, I think this is a reasonable and an appropriate and a fair disposition of the matter. We could not reach agreement in time to get it done any other way, and this assures the Republican leader that a bill incorporating provisions which he feels should be in the Brady bill will be brought up and, without amendment and with a limited time, voted on when we return next year. The House leadership has committed that if the Senate brings it up, they will bring it up under a closed rule and do the same thing there.

I want to make clear to the Republican leader that he has not asked for nor have we given an agreement or a commitment to support the measure. We do not know that yet. Obviously, we want to see it; we want to review it. This has been the subject of very lengthy and, as I said, tedious negotiation. But we are committing ourselves in good faith to having it brought up, debating it, and I expect to do it very early in the session next year. I will, of course, as always, consult with the Republican leader before making a decision on that. So that matter can be dealt with.

In the meantime, the Brady bill has now been passed. I hope that the President will sign it shortly. I want to congratulate all of those who have worked so long and hard to make it possible for the Brady bill to become law, not the least of which, of course, includes Jim and Sarah Brady themselves who have worked tirelessly on this matter for many years; Senator METZENBAUM, who was the original sponsor and author of the bill and who for many years was a lonely voice; Senator KOHL, of Wisconsin, who has committed himself to this subject and worked very hard on it; and Senator DOLE, who, along with myself, has been at the center of the discussions on it for the past 2½ years. So I thank my colleague very much for his cooperation. I am pleased to say that we will not have to come in next week and we can now leave for Thanksgiving and Christmas and then return next year refreshed and ready to roll.

Mr. DOLE. I wonder if the leaders might get a couple extra days off in January.

Again, I want to thank the majority leader. I also had a good visit this morning with my good friend, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator BIDEN. We have had our little tiff here, but we understand each other. We are both grown. He indicated a willingness to help the process. He did not say he could vote for the bill, but we have given a draft to a member of his staff, who has been very helpful to us. She understands better than probably the principals, as does Anita.

In any event, we have been working on this for a long time together. It seems to me that we have reached the conclusion that most of our colleagues, even though they may oppose the bill, I think most of my colleagues—I can speak on this side. I just talked with Senator CRAIG, who I think is a very responsible Member of the Senate and feels very strongly about this measure. He is in Boise, ID. I have just had a conversation with him, and he said, "You can indicate, while I could not vote for the conference report, I certainly support the process." That was very important. I needed that, I might say to the majority leader.

I also talked with Senator Bob SMITH from New Hampshire, who felt very strongly about this. He felt we probably should have filibustered—a real filibuster. He indicated he could not vote for the conference report, but he supported the process.

It seems to me after a long, long, hard fight, Jim Brady has won. I want to congratulate him and congratulate Sarah Brady. We used to work together at the Republican National Committee. I know that this ordeal has been long and hard and frustrating for them. I believe all of us will feel better having this issue behind us. There will be other issues, maybe other gun issues, but at least as far as the Brady bill is concerned, it has now been passed. It will go to the President. There is no question in my mind the President will sign it as quickly as he receives it.

I will also say that I appreciate Speaker FOLEY's willingness to assist us.

The majority leader does point out that there is a time agreement. We hope there is a closed rule. But it is rather an exceptional request because of the circumstances to let the conference report go. We believe we can strengthen the Brady bill as we have been saying in the Chamber here for a number of days by adding provisions that will be in this bill which will be introduced by 4 o'clock. What they refer to is the 24-month waiting period before you kick in the computers.

We have now since been able to talk with the FBI. We have received some good information from the FBI, the person in charge of the computers. We want to strengthen this bill. That has been our hope from the start. The Brady bill has been a waiting period. Ours has been an instant check. We believe the instant check is working very well in many States. We believe it ought to be expanded. That is what the vote will be on.

We will also suggest that if somebody has been adjudicated mentally incompetent, or somebody has been acquitted in a crime because of criminal insanity, they cannot have weapons. We will give you case after case after case where people who have been adjudicated incompetent, mentally incompetent, criminally insane—in fact, there was, I understand, on "Date Line NBC" just last night where someone who was adjudicated criminally insane and was released after confinement after he had killed one person and shot another person three times, was back on the street, and he could get a gun under the Brady bill.

Fourteen years ago, Michael Levin of Ohio kidnapped Georgine and Julius Kravitz, demanded $1 million in ransom, forced them into a car and drove them to a prearranged motel room. Julius pleaded for the life of his wife. Kravitz responded by shooting Georgine three times, throwing her out of the car and later murdering Julius.

But Georgine survived her three bullet wounds and testified against him. He pleaded guilty by reason of insanity and the plea was accepted. He is in Cleveland, OH today, a free man, released after over a decade in mental hospitals. But he can erupt at any time. He is in Cleveland. He is walking the streets—a potentially dangerous man, observes State Attorney General Lee Fisher, a supporter, I believe, of the Brady bill. And, while in the hospital insisting he was insane, he repeatedly wrote death threats to his wife. Now she is hiding and he is free.

On November 22, ABC's "Day One" interviewed him and he said, "Thank God for Federal courts"—the court that ultimately released him to the street. "That's why I'm out now."

So these are the things we want to address. We want the media to focus on some of these provisions. Maybe we can do that now objectively with the Brady bill behind us. So we are going to make our case. There is going to be a vote. We are going to do our best, and I think we can prevail.

But again, I thank the majority leader for his patience. I know we both have other commitments today, and so I yield the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The majority leader.

Mr. MITCHELL. I wish to conclude this discussion, at least among us, by saying that this is a significant accomplishment. It is an important victory for the American people. It will not, I repeat not, by itself end violence in America. It will not by itself end gun violence in America. No one should denigrate this measure by establishing for it an impossible standard which it must necessarily fail to meet. It is, however, a significant, albeit modest, step forward in what must be a total social effort to bring under control the violence that is an epidemic in America, and especially in American cities.

The assault weapons ban, the additional police on the streets that the crime bill will provide, the more swift prosecution, the more certain punishment, that measure, a whole range of others, can provide some reasonable progress toward attaining our objective of bringing under control the epidemic of violence that plagues American cities and streets all over this country.

I know there are some who oppose this measure and say, "Well, it will not stop violence." Of course, it will not. "Well, it will not end the presence of guns in America." Of course, it will not. No one has ever said or suggested that it will. But it is a significant, even though modest, reasonable step forward in trying to keep weapons out of the hands of those who ought not to have them. That is what this is all about. Convicted felons, persons with mental illness, publicly adjudicated, juveniles, drug addicts, others who ought not to be possessing firearms, this is an effort to keep them out of their hands.

Mr. President, I know there are some who will say and who will be quoted as saying that this will not end crime. Of course, it will not. That it will not end the presence of guns. Of course, it will not. That it will not end violence. Of course, it will not. Let us not diminish the significance of this action by suggesting an unattainable standard. It is a reasonable, positive, sensible, modest step to bringing under control the epidemic of violence in our society.

I congratulated several people. I wish to mention just a couple of others. Senator BIDEN, who is not here today, is the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. I repeat what I have said publicly on many occasions, and I know I may not have agreement on this, but I am expressing my personal opinion as majority leader. Senator BIDEN is the best manager of legislation in the Senate—the best, bar none. It is indisputable, in my judgment, that without Senator BIDEN's leadership, aggressive efforts and persistence we would not have passed the comprehensive crime bill, which we did pass, which all are now hailing, and we would not have passed this measure. I know there have been disagreements, but my hope is that those are now behind us and we can work together on other measures.

I have already mentioned Senator METZENBAUM.

There are dozens of staff, but I wish to mention especially three who I think did play an important role on our side. I know there have been many on Senator DOLE's side, and he will mention them, I am certain.

At the risk of offending by omission others, I wish to mention three people: Cynthia Hogan of Senator BIDEN's staff was truly a great help in this matter, always knowledgeable, always courteous, always helpful; Joel Johnson of Senator METZENBAUM's staff can be described in the same way; and finally, and to me most important, Anita Jensen of my staff, who is the person most responsible for creating the concept which is now law. That is, as I described earlier, the Brady bill initially was just a waiting period. The NRA initially was just an instant check system. And over that period of discussion of many months in 1991, Anita Jensen first came up with the concept, which she proposed to me, which I then presented and carried forward which has now become law of combining the two—in effect, taking the best of two approaches and putting them into a single package which would do the best job for the country. I think not many Americans know or have heard of Anita Jensen, but they should know of all the people responsible for getting this done, she ranks right at the very top.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Republican leader.

Mr. DOLE. I do not want to prolong it. I just want to make another point. I certainly agree with what the majority leader just stated. I think it demonstrates again, if you did not have confidence in the two leaders, if we did not trust each other, we would not be here this afternoon. That is the way we have worked since the majority leader has been the majority leader. It is the only way we can operate. We may disagree, but if we did not try to keep moving, nothing would happen.

So again I wish to thank the majority leader. I also want to thank the Senator from Oregon, who was in the Chamber early this morning, who talked to the Bradys earlier this morning, and all of my colleagues who have called in saying let us try to work something out.

I wish to agree with what the majority leader said. This is not going to end crime, not going to end people getting guns. In fact, there are conflicting views whether it is going to have any impact at all. But it is the law now. If we are standing here a year from now or 2 years from now saying it ought to be changed, that is something else. But at least it is passed.

I congratulate, I wish to also say, people on Handgun, Inc., and the NRA. They may be miles apart, but in this particular case there had to be some give and take with these particular groups. And I wish to thank members of the NRA staff for their very objective assistance and help over the past several weeks.

Earlier we put out a hotline and asked people who wanted to be recorded against the conference report, and I particularly mentioned Senator HUTCHISON of Texas, but I will include in the RECORD others who want to be recorded "no" on the conference report. And then I would announce that any other Senators who want to be recorded "no," if it is not possible to get them all today, I will enter into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Tuesday, January 25, 1994, a complete list of those Members who wish to be officially announced in opposition to the conference report.

I ask unanimous consent that the list of Senators be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REPUBLICAN SENATORS WHO VOTED "NO" ON THE BRADY BILL CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. Brown.
Mr. Burns.
Mr. Cochran.
Mr. Craig.
Mr. Faircloth.
Mr. Gramm.
Mr. Hatch.
Mr. Helms.
Mrs. Hutchison.
Mr. Kempthorne.
Mr. Lott.
Mr. Pressler.
Mr. Smith.
Mr. Stevens.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, some have said if you voted, there would be 58 Members in opposition to the conference report. I do not think that would happen. But in any event, they will have a chance to record and to announce their positions.

Mr. HATFIELD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD].

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I want to express not only my appreciation, but—I am sure I speak for all the Members who are home preparing for Thanksgiving, for the holidays—our gratitude to the leaders of our Senate in resolving this issue.

I think the majority leader and the minority leader, Senator MITCHELL of Maine and Senator DOLE of Kansas, deserve the highest of accolades.

Mr. President, this was a very, very, very testy time. This was a very, very difficult issue. I think it has been resolved in a very, very professional parliamentary style because no one can claim 100 percent victory.

But there is an imprint—there is a fingerprint or imprint, whatever you want to call it—on this bill from both sides. I think that is the essence of good legislative procedure.

When you take this total package of what is going to be taken up in the beginning of the new session, the unresolved issues, that certainly can be said as part of the imprint of those who were opposed to this legislation.

I think passing the Brady bill, of which I am a cosponsor and a strong supporter, is certainly a victory for those of us who have supported this proposition.

But again, I think both sides can see their own imprint. I think that is important.

Mr. President, I am delighted and very happy for the institution as a whole. As I spoke earlier, I think the public supports this kind of action and in my estimation will be delighted, will be happy, and will be proud of the institution of the Senate, of the Congress as a whole, and the House.

Perhaps we will see a few points rise in the popularity polls, or the poll of respect or the poll of favorability, whatever you want to indicate, as far as the judgment of the Congress. I think this kind of action deserves a little blip upward in that stream and in that poll. I am very, very happy about the outcome.

One last point: I did talk to the Bradys, to Sarah Brady, a couple of hours ago. She was most happy, most pleased, that we were in the process of reaching this solution.

So from those who are both supportive and those who are perhaps on the other side, I think we can all take a sigh of relief that it is finished for this Congress, and that we have launched a very important experiment in trying to reduce crime in this country by reducing the weaponry available to irresponsible people.

As the majority leader and the minority leader both said, this is not the panacea, this is not going to be the ultimate solution at all, any more than the crime bill itself, which there will be a handful voting against, not because there were not good parts to it, but because I feel they relied too much on the failed policy of building more jails, having more policemen, and executing more people.

Nevertheless, I think together these restrictions on assault weapons and this particular Brady bill will have a positive effect.

I would like to say that on our side, Senator HATCH, who is the ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, and his chief of staff on this fine bill, Manus Cooney, and others on our side, certainly have contributed to this solution, whether they were supportive or in opposition.

It was an exercise in good legislative process of considering the pros and cons, and now this solution that Senator MITCHELL and Senator DOLE have achieved.

So I am very proud of this day, and to be a Member of the Senate.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

POLITICS AND THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, they say that justice is blind. But as the Clinton administration nears the end of its first year, I am concerned that the blindfold at the Department of Justice may have been removed.

Whenever there is the slightest suggestion of a miscue by a Republican, the Justice Department is ready to sweep in take charge of the situation. But when allegations are directed at a Democrat, then the Justice Department would rather sweep things under the rug.

As the Wall Street Journal argued Monday, despite the Justice Department's continuing interest in allegations of vote fraud in New Jersey, there is no such attention to what the Journal calls "a far more documented case"—Republican allegations of massive vote irregularities in Pennsylvania's second Senate district, which determined control of the State Senate. The Journal says:

> U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno, who campaigned for Jim Florio, has investigators combing New Jersey looking for what appears to be phantom payoffs. No interest, though, in the documented political exploitation of Hispanics just across the river in Philadelphia.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Wall Street Journal's November 23 editorial "Philly outvotes New Jersey," as well as an accompanying Journal piece by John Fund, be inserted in the RECORD following my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. But the appearance of politics at the Justice Department does not end there. Remember the travelgate affair, the State Department file search, the Crown Heights civil rights case, and allegations concerning other matters surrounding the present administration.

In July, after the White House issued its so-called travelgate management review, I wrote to Attorney General Reno requesting the appointment of a special counsel to look into the travelgate affair. My letter, citing specific laws that may have been violated, went unanswered for 2 months. Then I received a response from the Deputy Attorney General. Meanwhile, Congress directed the General Accounting Office to conduct its own investigation of travelgate. On September 30, the GAO issued an interim report, claiming it was having trouble getting access to relevant documents in possession of both the Justice Department and the White House.

When it was learned that State Department staff had allegedly searched the files of Bush administration State Department officials, Senator MCCONNELL wrote to the Attorney General requesting the appointment of a special counsel. Attorney General Reno denied that request. The Justice Department has since received a State Department inspector general's report—also requested by Republicans. The Justice Department has had that report for more than 2 weeks, but has made no decision on whether to proceed with a prosecution.

Senate Republicans, bolstered by an overwhelming sense-of-the-Senate vote, also urged a Federal civil rights investigation into the 1991 murder of Yankel Rosenbaum during the rioting in the Crown Heights section of New York. The Justice Department resisted, some speculated, to protect the reelection effort of New York's Democrat mayor. The Justice Department now claims that it has initiated an investigation, but it is my understanding that key witnesses have not yet been contacted.

Make no mistake, the Attorney General has the authority to appoint special counsels. Attorney General Reno's predecessor, William Barr, used that authority in the Inslaw case and the House bank scandal. But the appearance of politics at the Justice Department does not end there. In fact, it may have begun with Attorney General Reno's March Massacre, the simultaneous firing of all 93 U.S. attorneys, in the view of some just to remove Jay Stephens, U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia.

Mr. President, the scales of justice should not be tainted by political decisions, and I hope that is not the case. But many questions are being raised by what appears to be a partisan approach to the pursuit of certain matters before the Department of Justice.

PHILLY OUTVOTES JERSEY

For all the outrage vented over Ed Rollins's retracted claims that he discouraged minority voting in New Jersey, there's a far more well-documented case of minority voters being pressured this month into casting improper absentee ballots in neighboring Philadelphia. It's quite an amazing tale, and for national media still lost driving around Newark and Paterson in search of the Rollins lucre, we offer a roadmap to a real story.

The Philadelphia Inquirer has interviewed more than 150 minority voters who claim they were misled by Democratic workers into voting absentee even though they weren't eligible. Only voters who are ill or traveling on business can legally vote absentee in Pennsylvania.

Late last Thursday, Democrat William Stinson was sworn in only an hour after his disputed Nov. 2 election as a State Senator was certified. His seating gives the Democrats 25 of the 50 State Senators and partisan control, since a Democratic lieutenant governor can break the tie. Republicans charge massive irregularities and are challenging the election. They note that Republican Bruce Marks led by 562 votes among those who voted on Election Day. He lost because 1,391 of the 1,757 absentee ballots went for Democrat Stinson. In one ward, he won 99% of the absentees.

Normally only about 900 absentee ballots are cast in North Philadelphia's Second Senate District, and they usually break evenly. But Democratic workers fanned out through Hispanic neighborhoods telling residents about la nueva forma de votar—the new way to vote.

They carried applications for absentee ballots, had voters fill them out and returned a few days later with the actual ballots. Ana Lopez, a 19th Ward committeewoman, says she was deluged with calls from people asking why they could vote at home. "I told them it was illegal and that they shouldn't do it," she says.

But many voters still cast suspect ballots. Aracelis Velasquez told the Inquirer she felt pressured. "I told them I can't see well and that I needed to get my glasses. They said, 'Don't worry about it, just make an X right here and sign.' I did it." Victor Torres was accosted by a man who insisted he sign a form. He did, but uncertain about what he had signed he went to the polls and voted. Only later did he learn he'd voted twice. Voter Evelyn Adames thought she was signing for a program "where they fix the broken windows and your heating."

Zoraida Rodriguez was told she could vote at home, along with her brother and her common-law husband, both of whom are in jail. "I didn't think it would be right, but he said anybody can fill out anybody's paper, so I did," Ms. Rodriguez told the Inquirer. As for her own ballot, she told the campaign worker that she didn't know who to vote for. "He said, 'Well, vote for this person, because he's the one I work for,' so I did." Election records bear out her story.

Mr. Marks, the Republican candidate, challenged the ballots, but the case was heard by Judge Eugene Maier, whose wife has a patronage appointment with Democratic Mayor Ed Rendell. Mr. Stinson, the Democratic candidate, is a former aide to Mr. Rendell. The State Supreme Court took the case away from Judge Maier, but only after he had ordered virtually all the absentee ballots to be counted. By now, the ballots have been taken out of the envelopes that contain the voters' names, making it difficult to identify any suspect ones.

On Sunday, three voters came forward to say their signatures on absentee ballots were forged. Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno, who campaigned for Jim Florio, has investigators combing New Jersey looking for what appears to be phantom payoffs (discussed in the nearby feature). No interest, though, in the documented political exploitation of Hispanics just across the river in Philadelphia. The next time the visitors from the Beltway take the train up to New Jersey, they should get off first at Philadelphia's 30th Street Station and ask some questions.

THE ROLLINS CLOUD'S SILVER LINING

(By John Fund)

* * * * *

Voter suppression isn't unknown in politics, but it's rare. In 1960, Texas Democrats delivered too few voting machines to GOP areas. Some Republicans couldn't wait in line, and left. In 1981, the GOP intimidated voters when they hired off-duty police officers to patrol against fraud at New Jersey polling places.

But the under-the-table deals with Democrats that Ed Rollins described strike seasoned observers as implausible. "The idea you win a race by striking deals with adversaries who can turn you in is ludicrous," says Ron Faucheux, editor of Campaigns & Elections magazine and a former Louisiana Democratic legislator.

- Mr. Florio lost in New Jersey because, although the turnout in cities went up, he won a smaller percentage of urban votes. The Bergen Record, the main newspaper in New Jersey's largest county, found that turnout in the state's five largest cities went up 1% over the last gubernatorial election. But voter registration in those cities was down 11% from 1989, so the cities cast fewer votes overall. In Jersey City, registration fell by 9% but turnout in the black Bergen-Lafayette ward was up 4%. Hudson County Executive Robert Janiszewsi, a Democrat, reports he had no difficulty hiring 1,500 Election Day workers to ring doorbells, man sound trucks and drive voters to the polls.

What was different was that Mrs. Whitman did well for a Republican in the cities. In 1989, Mr. Florio won 92% in Bergen-Lafayette. This year, he took only 78%. Statewide, exit polls report Mrs. Whitman won 25% of black voters. Jersey City Mayor Bret Schundler, a Republican who won last May with 40% of the black vote, isn't surprised: "I know African-Americans who liked her support for school choice. They also knew unemployment in this area went from 7% to 15% under Florio."

Essex County Democratic Chairman Thomas Giblin says the Florio campaign didn't aggressively register voters. He notes that turnout in Newark rose to 46% from 43%, but that registration dropped to only 90,000 from 107,000 in 1989. He says that continuing to question Mr. Rollins about voter suppression is like "beating a dead horse."

Indeed, Steve DeMicco, former executive director of New Jersey's Democratic State Committee, thinks Mrs. Whitman's energetic response to the Rollins crisis may help her build ties to black voters: "This is an opportunity that was created for her and it's one she seized and turned to her own advantage."

Mr. Florio's operatives didn't understand the cities. Mayor James of Newark told the New York Times that the Florio forces used inexperienced "out-of-towners who simply did not connect with the local constituency." Mr. Florio didn't campaign in many cities, signaling that he was taking the black vote for granted. Mrs. Whitman, in contrast, toured public housing projects with Mayor Schundler and former Housing Secretary Jack Kemp.

Further public attention on "street money" will lead to calls for its reform, which would mostly hurt Democrats. Charles Cook, a political analyst who once worked for the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, says "Democrats nationally would rather the Ed Rollins discussion go away entirely, as a complete look at the existence and use of street money wouldn't be welcome.

Mr. Cook says a Clinton campaign official boasted to him that in 1992 the Democrats spent $900,000 in street money in New Jersey alone. "He said they needed so many small bills that it took them three days to get it from the banks," Mr. Cook says. "He then told how off-duty police officers delivered the cash." Perhaps his Democratic friend was telling a Rollins. But maybe not.

Mr. Cook estimates that for every $1 the GOP spends in cash to bring out voters, the Democrats spend $6 to $8. "I can't believe how sanctimonious some Democrats are about Rollins' comments," he says.

Ken Cornell, a New Jersey native who spent many years as a Democratic committeeman in Pennsylvania, says that Democrats who are demanding that every urban rock be turned over in probing the Rollins claims "don't realize that if you regulate street money you take away the lifeblood of the Democratic Party." He says any look at black churches will find that some ministers openly urge their congregations to vote a certain way, a violation of IRS rules. "Rollins would have done something wrong in paying the ministers, but he would have been simply paying to obey the law by not abusing their nonprofit status," he says.

Political reform is needed, but it's erstwhile reformers who are blocking some of the most needed changes. Already New Jersey's GOP Assembly Speaker Chuck Haytaian has proposed a bill to outlay the use of cash for "street money." All payments to individuals would have to be by check. The Bergen Record reports that Democratic legislators are calling his proposal "rash." Mr. Cornell, the former Democratic committeeman, says urban Democrats "are very concerned about reforms like that."

Indeed, earlier this year the U.S. Senate's campaign reform proposal would have barred candidates from raising "soft money" for outside groups that register voters. It was prompted by former Keating Five Sen. Alan Cranston's funneling of Keating money into questionable registration groups. The provision was dropped by House leaders after the Congressional Black Caucus defended the growing use of soft money. Rep. Mike Synar, a liberal Democrat, fought the House leadership's campaign reform bill because it didn't deal honestly with soft money. On Sunday, his effort to defeat the bill failed 220 to 207.

Mr. Faucheux, the editor of Campaigns & Elections magazine, says he welcomes reform of soft money. "Our current campaign law pretends to be reform but isn't. It benefits incumbents and rich candidates, violates free speech and opens up loopholes and inequities that make a mockery of the process." Mr. Faucheux wants to deregulate campaign finance law and instead have full public disclosure "of every penny that goes into a campaign, and every penny that comes out."

It's appropriate that a probe into Mr. Rollins's comments continue, despite his sworn denials. But the public policy debate would be improved if the inquiry were broadened to also look at street money and absentee ballot manipulation. It would be ironic if in breaking the code of silence that governs the discussion of America's seamier political practices, Ed Rollins ends up being an inadvertent catalyst for some genuine political reforms.

MORNING BUSINESS

IRRESPONSIBLE CONGRESS? HERE IS TODAY'S BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, as of the close of business yesterday, November 23, 1993, the Federal debt stood at $4,469,257,508,771.35, meaning that on a per capita basis, every man, woman and child in America owes $17,399.65 as his or her share of that debt.

DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION BILL

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I wish to enter into a colloquy with the distinguished chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Senator NUNN.

During consideration of the Defense authorization bill for fiscal year 1994, it was my understanding that an agreed conference language provision would be included in the conference report. The provision simply encourages the Defense Department to help develop a U.S. production base in critical technologies for our defense.

But, because of the hectic final negotiations toward a conference compromise, this provision was inadvertently omitted. I understand that there was no intention to omit this language provision. It was purely an oversight on the part of staff.

The agreed language read as follows:

The committee understands that the Department of Defense has chosen several critical technologies and industries in which to invest Federal funds to avoid dependence upon foreign suppliers of scarce and sophisticated military components. This includes technologies such as active matrix liquid crystal displays (AMLCDs). Indeed, the committee believes that the department can benefit from nurturing domestic sources, especially within emerging or fledgling technologies that have been determined to be critical to our defense industrial base, such as AMLCDs, in which the United States still may have the technological lead. The committee encourages the department, therefore, to use available resources to assist in developing a U.S. production base in these technologies.

Would the chairman of the Armed Services Committee agree that this provision was intended to be included in the conference report, and that it should be considered part of the conference report?

Mr. NUNN. Yes, the Senator from Michigan is correct. This was purely a matter of inadvertent omission. The staff were negotiating so many contentious items at the end of our conference that this one agreed item was not included by accident.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the distinguished chairman and appreciate his assistance in this matter.

TITLE I—PUBLIC SAFETY AND POLICING

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Public Safety Partnership and Community Policing Act of 1993".

SEC. 102. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) according to data compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in 1961, there was approximately 1 reported violent crime per city police officer, but while from 1961 to 1991 there was no substantial increase in United States cities' police employment rate, during the same period the number of reported violent crimes per city police officer rose to approximately 4.6 per officer;

(2) National Crime Survey figures indicate that nearly 5,000,000 households in the United States had at least 1 member who had been a victim of violent crime during 1991;

(3) these victims of violence experienced more than 6,400,000 crimes of which about one-half were reported to law enforcement authorities;

(4) community-oriented policing ("cops on the beat") enhances communication and cooperation between law enforcement and members of the community;

(5) such communication and cooperation between law enforcement and members of the community significantly assists in preventing and controlling crime and violence, thus enhancing public safety; and

(6) while increasing and maintaining police resources and presence in the community are the long-term responsibility of State and local governments, State and local law enforcement agencies are in need of immediate assistance to begin the process of rehiring officers who have been laid off for budgetary reasons and hiring new, additional officers to assist in the implementation of community-oriented policing.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are to—

(1) substantially increase the number of law enforcement officers interacting directly with members of the community ("cops on the beat");

(2) provide additional and more effective training to law enforcement officers to enhance their problem solving, service, and other skills needed in interacting with members of the community;

(3) encourage the development and implementation of innovative programs to permit members of the community to assist State and local law enforcement agencies in the prevention of crime in the community; and

(4) encourage the development of new technologies to assist State and local law enforcement agencies in reorienting the emphasis of their activities from reacting to crime to preventing crime, by establishing a program of grants and assistance in furtherance of these objectives, including the authorization for a period of 6 years of grants for the hiring and rehiring of additional career law enforcement officers.

SEC. 103. COMMUNITY POLICING; "COPS ON THE BEAT".

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating part Q as part R;

(2) by redesignating section 1701 as section 1801; and

(3) by inserting after part P the following new part:

"PART Q—PUBLIC SAFETY AND CITY POLICING; 'COPS ON THE BEAT'

"SEC. 1701. AUTHORITY TO MAKE PUBLIC SAFETY AND COMMUNITY POLICING GRANTS.

"(a) GRANT AUTHORIZATION.—The Attorney General may make grants to units of State and local government, and to other public and private entities, to increase police presence, to expand and improve cooperative efforts between law enforcement agencies and members of the community to address crime and disorder problems, and otherwise to enhance public safety.

"(2) hire new, additional career law enforcement officers for deployment in community-oriented policing across the Nation.

"(c) TROOPS-TO-COPS PROGRAMS.—(1) Grants made under subsection (a) may be used to hire former members of the Armed Forces to serve as career law enforcement officers for deployment in community-oriented policing, particularly in communities that are adversely affected by a recent military base closing.

"(2) In this subsection, 'former member of the Armed Forces' means a member of the Armed Forces of the United States who is involuntarily separated from the Armed Forces within the meaning of section 1141 of title 10, United States Code.

"(d) ADDITIONAL GRANT PROJECTS.—Grants made under subsection (a) may include programs, projects, and other activities to—

"(2) provide specialized training to law enforcement officers to enhance their conflict resolution, mediation, problem solving, service, and other skills needed to work in partnership with members of the community;

"(3) increase police participation in multidisciplinary early intervention teams;

"(4) develop new technologies to assist State and local law enforcement agencies in reorienting the emphasis of their activities from reacting to crime to preventing crime;

"(5) develop and implement innovative programs to permit members of the community to assist State and local law enforcement agencies in the prevention of crime in the community, such as a citizens police academy, including programs designed to increase the level of access to the criminal justice system enjoyed by victims, witnesses, and ordinary citizens by establishing decentralized satellite offices (including video facilities) of principal criminal courts buildings;

"(6) establish innovative programs to reduce, and keep to a minimum, the amount of time that law enforcement officers must be away from the community while awaiting court appearances;

"(7) establish and implement innovative programs to increase and enhance proactive crime control and prevention programs involving law enforcement officers and young persons in the community; and

"(8) develop and establish new administrative and managerial systems to facilitate the adoption of community-oriented policing as an organization-wide philosophy.

"(e) PREFERENTIAL CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS FOR CERTAIN GRANTS.—In awarding grants under this part, the Attorney General shall give preferential consideration, where feasible, to applications for hiring and rehiring additional career law enforcement officers that involve—

(2) hiring former members of the Armed Forces to serve as career law enforcement officers under subsection (c).

"(f) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—(1) The Attorney General may provide technical assistance to units of State and local government, and to other public and private entities, in furtherance of the purposes of the Public Safety Partnership and Community Policing Act of 1993.

"(2) The technical assistance provided by the Attorney General may include the development of a flexible model that will define for State and local governments, and other public and private entities, definitions and strategies associated with community or problem-oriented policing and methodologies for its implementation.

"(3) The technical assistance provided by the Attorney General may include the establishment and operation of training centers or facilities, either directly or by contracting or cooperative arrangements. "(g) UTILIZATION OF COMPONENTS.—The Attorney General may utilize any component or components of the Department of Justice in carrying out this part.

In relation to a grant for a period exceeding 1 year for hiring or rehiring career law enforcement officers, the Federal share shall decrease from year to year for up to 5 years, looking toward the continuation of the increased hiring level using State or local sources of funding following the conclusion of Federal support, as provided in an approved plan pursuant to section 1702(c)(8).

Prior to the expiration of this grant authority, the Attorney General shall submit a report to Congress concerning the experience with and effects of such grants. The report may include any recommendations the Attorney General may have for amendments to this part and related provisions of law in light of the termination of the authority to make grants for the hiring and rehiring of additional career law enforcement officers.

"(c) CONTENTS.—In accordance with the regulations or guidelines established by the Attorney General, each application for a grant under this part shall—

"SEC. 1705. LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.

"(a) NONSUPPLANTING REQUIREMENT.—Funds made available under this part to State or local governments or to Indian tribal governments shall not be used to supplant State or local funds, or, in the case of Indian tribes, funds supplied by the Department of the Interior, but shall be used to increase the amount of funds that would, in the absence of Federal funds received under this part, be made available from State or local sources, or in the case of Indian tribes, from funds supplied by the Department of the Interior.

"(a) A defendant who has been found guilty of—

"(1) an offense described in section 794 or section 2381;

"(2) an offense described in section 1751(c), if the offense, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593, constitutes an attempt to intentionally kill the President of the United States and results in bodily injury to the President or comes dangerously close to causing the death of the President; or

"(3) any other offense for which a sentence of death is provided, if the defendant, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593—

"(A) intentionally killed the victim;

"(B) intentionally inflicted serious bodily injury that resulted in the death of the victim;

"(C) intentionally participated in an act, contemplating that the life of a person would be taken or intending that lethal force would be used in connection with a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, and the victim died as a direct result of the act; or

"(D) intentionally and specifically engaged in an act, knowing that the act created a grave risk of death to a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, such that participation in the act constituted a reckless disregard for human life and the victim died as a direct result of the act, shall be sentenced to death if, after consideration of the factors set forth in section 3592 in the course of a hearing held pursuant to section 3593, it is determined that imposition of a sentence of death is justified, except that no person may be sentenced to death who was less than 18 years of age at the time of the offense.

"(b) a defendant who has been found guilty of—

"(1) an offense referred to in section 408(c)(1) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848(c)(1)), committed as part of a continuing criminal enterprise offense under the conditions described in subsection (b) of that section which involved not less than twice the quantity of controlled substance described in subsection (b)(2)(A) or twice the gross receipts described in subsection (b)(2)(B);

"(2) an offense referred to in section 408(c)(1) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848(c)(1)), committed as part of a continuing criminal enterprise offense under that section, where the defendant is a principal administrator, organizer, or leader of such an enterprise, and the defendant, in order to obstruct the investigation or prosecution of the enterprise or an offense involved in the enterprise, attempts to kill or knowingly directs, advises, authorizes, or assists another to attempt to kill any public officer, juror, witness, or members of the family or household of such a person;

"(3) an offense constituting a felony violation of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.), where the defendant, intending to cause death or acting with reckless disregard for human life, engages in such a violation, and the death of another person results in the course of the violation or from the use of the controlled substance involved in the violation; shall be sentenced to death if, after consideration of the factors set forth in section 3592, including the aggravating factors set forth at subsection (c) below, in the course of a hearing held pursuant to section 3593, it is determined that imposition of a sentence of death is justified, except that no person may be sentenced to death who was less than 18 years of age at the time of the offense.

"(c) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR DRUG OFFENSE DEATH PENALTY.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in subsection (b) above, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OFFENSE FOR WHICH A SENTENCE OF DEATH OR LIFE IMPRISONMENT WAS AUTHORIZED.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or death was authorized by statute.

"(2) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OTHER SERIOUS OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more Federal or State offenses, each punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the importation, manufacture, or distribution of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)) or the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person.

"(3) PREVIOUS SERIOUS DRUG FELONY CONVICTION.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense involving the manufacture, distribution, importation, or possession of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)) for which a sentence of five or more years of imprisonment was authorized by statute.

"(4) USE OF FIREARM.—In committing the offense, or in furtherance of a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, the defendant used a firearm or knowingly directed, advised, authorized, or assisted another to use a firearm to threaten, intimidate, assault, or injure a person.

"(5) DISTRIBUTION TO PERSONS UNDER 21.—The offense, or a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, involved conduct proscribed by section 418 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 859) which was committed directly by the defendant.

"(6) DISTRIBUTION NEAR SCHOOLS.—The offense, or a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, involved conduct proscribed by section 419 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 860) which was committed directly by the defendant.

"(7) USING MINORS IN TRAFFICKING.—The offense, or a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, involved conduct proscribed by section 420 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 861) which was committed directly by the defendant.

"(8) LETHAL ADULTERANT.—The offense involved the importation, manufacture, or distribution of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)), mixed with a potentially lethal adulterant, and the defendant was aware of the presence of the adulterant.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor for which notice has been given exists.

"§3592. Mitigating and aggravating factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a sentence of death is to be imposed on a defendant, the finder of fact shall consider any mitigating factor, including the following:

"(1) IMPAIRED CAPACITY.—The defendant's capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, regardless of whether the capacity was so impaired as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(2) DURESS.—The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, regardless of whether the duress was of such a degree as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(3) MINOR PARTICIPATION.—The defendant is punishable as a principal in the offense, which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor, regardless of whether the participation was so minor as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(4) EQUALLY CULPABLE DEFENDANTS.—Another defendant or defendants, equally culpable in the crime, will not be punished by death.

"(5) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL RECORD.—The defendant did not have a significant prior history of other criminal conduct.

"(6) DISTURBANCE.—The defendant committed the offense under severe mental or emotional disturbance.

"(7) VICTIM'S CONSENT.—The victim consented to the criminal conduct that resulted in the victim's death.

"(8) OTHER FACTORS.—Other factors in the defendant's background, record, or character or any other circumstance of the offense that mitigate against imposition of the death sentence.

"(b) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR ESPIONAGE AND TREASON.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591(1), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors for which notice has been given and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) PRIOR ESPIONAGE OR TREASON OFFENSE.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another offense involving espionage or treason for which a sentence of either life imprisonment or death was authorized by law.

"(2) GRAVE RISK TO NATIONAL SECURITY.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of substantial danger to the national security.

"(3) GRAVE RISK OF DEATH.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor for which notice has been given exists.

"(c) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR HOMICIDE AND FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER OF THE PRESIDENT.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591 (2) or (3), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors for which notice has been given and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) DEATH DURING COMMISSION OF ANOTHER CRIME.—The death, or injury resulting in death, occurred during the commission or attempted commission of, or during the immediate flight from the commission of, an offense under section 32 (destruction of aircraft or aircraft facilities), section 33 (destruction of motor vehicles or motor vehicle facilities), section 36 (violence at international airports), section 351 (violence against Members of Congress, Cabinet officers, or Supreme Court Justices), an offense under section 751 (prisoners in custody of institution or officer), section 794 (gathering or delivering defense information to aid foreign government), section 844(d) (transportation of explosives in interstate commerce for certain purposes), section 844(f) (destruction of Government property by explosives), section 1118 (prisoners serving life term), section 1201 (kidnaping), section 844(i) (destruction of property affecting interstate commerce by explosives), section 1116 (killing or attempted killing of diplomats), section 1203 (hostage taking), section 1992 (wrecking trains), section 2280 (maritime violence), section 2281 (maritime platform violence), section 2332 (terrorist acts abroad against United States nationals), section 2339 (use of weapons of mass destruction), or section 2381 (treason) of this title, or section 902 (i) or (n) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. 1472 (i) or (n)) (aircraft piracy).

"(2) INVOLVEMENT OF FIREARM OR PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF VIOLENT FELONY INVOLVING FIREARM.—For any offense, other than an offense for which a sentence of death is sought on the basis of section 924(c), the defendant—

"(A) during and in relation to the commission of the offense or in escaping or attempting to escape apprehension used or possessed a firearm (as defined in section 921); or

"(B) has previously been convicted of a Federal or State offense punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than 1 year, involving the use or attempted or threatened use of a firearm (as defined in section 921) against another person.

"(3) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OFFENSE FOR WHICH A SENTENCE OF DEATH OR LIFE IMPRISONMENT WAS AUTHORIZED.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or a sentence of death was authorized by statute.

"(4) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OTHER SERIOUS OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of 2 or more Federal or State offenses, punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than 1 year, committed on different occasions, involving the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person.

"(5) GRAVE RISK OF DEATH TO ADDITIONAL PERSONS.—The defendant, in the commission of the offense, or in escaping apprehension for the violation of the offense, knowingly created a grave risk of death to 1 or more persons in addition to the victim of the offense.

"(6) HEINOUS, CRUEL, OR DEPRAVED MANNER OF COMMITTING OFFENSE.—The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner in that it involved torture or serious physical abuse to the victim.

"(7) PROCUREMENT OF OFFENSE BY PAYMENT.—The defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment, or promise of payment, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(8) PECUNIARY GAIN.—The defendant committed the offense as consideration for the receipt, or in the expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(9) SUBSTANTIAL PLANNING AND PREMEDITATION.—The defendant committed the offense after substantial planning and premeditation to cause the death of a person or commit an act of terrorism.

"(10) CONVICTION FOR TWO FELONY DRUG OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of 2 or more State or Federal offenses punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the distribution of a controlled substance.

"(11) VULNERABILITY OF VICTIM.—The victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth, or infirmity.

"(12) CONVICTION FOR SERIOUS FEDERAL DRUG OFFENSES.—The defendant had previously been convicted of violating title II or III of the Controlled Substances Act for which a sentence of 5 or more years may be imposed or had previously been convicted of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise.

"(13) CONTINUING CRIMINAL ENTERPRISE INVOLVING DRUG SALES TO MINORS.—The defendant committed the offense in the course of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise in violation of section 408(c) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848(c)), and that violation involved the distribution of drugs to persons under the age of 21 in violation of section 418 of that Act (21 U.S.C. 859).

"(14) HIGH PUBLIC OFFICIALS.—The defendant committed the offense against—

"(A) the President of the United States, the President-elect, the Vice President, the Vice-President-elect, the Vice-President-designate, or, if there is no Vice President, the officer next in order of succession to the office of the President of the United States, or any person who is acting as President under the Constitution and laws of the United States;

"(B) a chief of state, head of government, or the political equivalent, of a foreign nation;

"(C) a foreign official listed in section 1116(b)(3)(A), if the official is in the United States on official business; or

"(D) a Federal public servant who is a judge, a law enforcement officer, or an employee of a United States penal or correctional institution—

"(i) while he or she is engaged in the performance of his or her official duties;

"(ii) because of the performance of his or her official duties; or

"(iii) because of his or her status as a public servant.

For purposes of this subparagraph, a 'law enforcement officer' is a public servant authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the prevention, investigation, or prosecution or adjudication of an offense, and includes those engaged in corrections, parole, or probation functions.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor for which notice has been given exists.

"§3593. Special hearing to determine whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) NOTICE BY THE GOVERNMENT.—If, in a case involving an offense described in section 3591, the attorney for the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that a sentence of death is justified under this chapter, the attorney shall, a reasonable time before the trial or before acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty, sign and file with the court, and serve on the defendant, a notice—

"(1) stating that the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that, if the defendant is convicted, a sentence of death is justified under this chapter and that the government will seek the sentence of death; and

"(2) setting forth the aggravating factor or factors that the government, if the defendant is convicted, proposes to prove as justifying a sentence of death.

The factors for which notice is provided under this subsection may include factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family, and may include oral testimony, a victim impact statement that identifies the victim of the offense and the extent and scope of the injury and loss suffered by the victim and the victim's family, and any other relevant information. The court may permit the attorney for the government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

"(b) HEARING BEFORE A COURT OR JURY.—If the attorney for the government has filed a notice as required under subsection (a) and the defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense described in section 3591, the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered, or another judge if that judge is unavailable, shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine the punishment to be imposed. The hearing shall be conducted—

"(1) before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt;

"(2) before a jury impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if—

"(A) the defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty;

"(B) the defendant was convicted after a trial before the court sitting without a jury;

"(C) the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause; or

"(D) after initial imposition of a sentence under this section, reconsideration of the sentence under this section is necessary; or

"(3) before the court alone, upon the motion of the defendant and with the approval of the attorney for the government.

A jury impaneled pursuant to paragraph (2) shall consist of 12 members, unless, at any time before the conclusion of the hearing, the parties stipulate, with the approval of the court, that it shall consist of a lesser number.

"(c) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—Notwithstanding rule 32(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, when a defendant is found guilty or pleads guilty to an offense under section 3591, no presentence report shall be prepared. At the sentencing hearing, information may be presented as to any matter relevant to the sentence, including any mitigating or aggravating factor permitted or required to be considered under section 3592. Information presented may include the trial transcript and exhibits. The defendant may present any information relevant to a mitigating factor. The government may present any information relevant to an aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (a). Information is admissible regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing admission of evidence at criminal trials except that information may be excluded if its probative value is outweighed by the danger of creating unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, or misleading the jury. The government and the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in the case of imposing a sentence of death. The government shall open the argument. The defendant shall be permitted to reply. The government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The burden of establishing the existence of any aggravating factor is on the government, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of establishing the existence of any mitigating factor is on the defendant, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established by a preponderance of the information.

"(d) RETURN OF SPECIAL FINDINGS.—The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider all the information received during the hearing. It shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factor or factors set forth in section 3592 found to exist and any other aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (a) found to exist. A finding with respect to a mitigating factor may be made by 1 or more members of the jury, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such factor established for purposes of this section regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established. A finding with respect to any aggravating factor must be unanimous. If no aggravating factor set forth in section 3592 is found to exist, the court shall impose a sentence other than death authorized by law.

"(e) RETURN OF A FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If, in the case of—

"(1) an offense described in section 3591(1), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(b) is found to exist; or

"(2) an offense described in section 3591 (2) or (3), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(c) is found to exist, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider whether all the aggravating factor or factors found to exist sufficiently outweigh all the mitigating factor or factors found to exist to justify a sentence of death, or, in the absence of a mitigating factor, whether the aggravating factor or factors alone are sufficient to justify a sentence of death. Based upon this consideration, the jury by unanimous vote, or if there is no jury, the court, shall recommend whether the defendant should be sentenced to death, to life imprisonment without possibility of release or some other lesser sentence.

"(f) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ENSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, prior to the return of a finding under subsection (e), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether a sentence of death is justified, it shall not consider the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim may be. The jury, upon return of a finding under subsection (e), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that consideration of the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim was not involved in reaching his or her individual decision and that the individual juror would have made the same recommendation regarding a sentence for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim may be.

"§3594. Imposition of a sentence of death

"Upon a recommendation under section 3593(e) that the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment without possibility of release, the court shall sentence the defendant accordingly. Otherwise, the court shall impose any lesser sentence that is authorized by law. Notwithstanding any other law, if the maximum term of imprisonment for the offense is life imprisonment, the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of release.

"§3595. Review of a sentence of death

"(a) APPEAL.—In a case in which a sentence of death is imposed, the sentence shall be subject to review by the court of appeals upon appeal by the defendant. Notice of appeal must be filed within the time specified for the filing of a notice of appeal. An appeal under this section may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all other cases.

"(b) REVIEW.—The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case, including—

"(1) the evidence submitted during the trial;

"(2) the information submitted during the sentencing hearing;

"(3) the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing; and

"(4) the special findings returned under section 3593(d).

"(c) DECISION AND DISPOSITION.—

"(1) The court of appeals shall address all substantive and procedural issues raised on the appeal of a sentence of death, and shall consider whether the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor and whether the evidence supports the special finding of the existence of an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592.

"(2) Whenever the court of appeals finds that—

"(A) the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor;

"(B) the admissible evidence and information adduced does not support the special finding of the existence of the required aggravating factor; or

"(C) the proceedings involved any other legal error requiring reversal of the sentence that was properly preserved for appeal under the rules of criminal procedure, the court shall remand the case for reconsideration under section 3593 or imposition of a sentence other than death. The court of appeals shall not reverse or vacate a sentence of death on account of any error which can be harmless, including any erroneous special finding of an aggravating factor, where the government establishes beyond a reasonable doubt that the error was harmless.

"(3) The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

"§3596. Implementation of a sentence of death

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A person who has been sentenced to death pursuant to this chapter shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and for review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States marshal, who shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed. If the law of the State does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death, the court shall designate another State, the law of which does provide for the implementation of a sentence of death, and the sentence shall be implemented in the latter State in the manner prescribed by such law.

"(b) PREGNANT WOMAN.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

"(c) MENTAL CAPACITY.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who is mentally retarded. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who, as a result of mental disability, lacks the mental capacity to understand the death penalty and why it was imposed on that person.

"§3597. Use of State facilities

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A United States marshal charged with supervising the implementation of a sentence of death may use appropriate State or local facilities for the purpose, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such an official employs for the purpose, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

"(b) EXCUSE OF AN EMPLOYEE ON MORAL OR RELIGIOUS GROUNDS.—No employee of any State department of corrections, the United States Department of Justice, the Federal Bureau of Prisons, or the United States Marshals Service, and no employee providing services to that department, bureau, or service under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment or contractual obligation, to be in attendance at or to participate in any prosecution or execution under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. In this subsection, 'participation in executions' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for execution and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.

"§3598. Special provisions for Indian country

"Notwithstanding sections 1152 and 1153, no person subject to the criminal jurisdiction of an Indian tribal government shall be subject to a capital sentence under this chapter for any offense the Federal jurisdiction for which is predicated solely on Indian country (as defined in section 1151 of this title) and which has occurred within the boundaries of Indian country, unless the governing body of the tribe has elected that this chapter have effect over land and persons subject to its criminal jurisdiction.".

"Sec.

"1931. Prohibited activity.

"§ 1930. Crimes in furtherance of gangs

"(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

"(1) Criminal street gangs have become increasingly prevalent and entrenched in our society in the last several decades. In many areas of the country, these gangs exert considerable control over other members of their community, particularly through the use of violence and drugs. Criminal street gangs have also become more national in scope, extending their influence beyond the urban areas in which they originated.

"(2) The major activities of criminal street gangs are crimes of violence and the distribution and use of illegal drugs. It is through these activities that criminal street gangs directly affect interstate and foreign commerce, even when their particular activities, viewed in isolation, appear to be purely intrastate in character.

"(b) BASIS FOR CHAPTER.—On the basis of the findings stated in subsection (a), the Congress determines that the provisions of this chapter are necessary and proper for the purpose of carrying into execution the powers of Congress to regulate commerce and to establish criminal law.

Subtitle F—Youth Handgun Safety

SEC. 661. FINDINGS AND DECLARATIONS.

The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) Crime, particularly crime involving drugs and guns, is a pervasive, nationwide problem.

(2) Problems with crime at the local level are exacerbated by the interstate movement of drugs, guns, and criminal gangs.

(3) Firearms and ammunition, and handguns in particular, move easily in interstate commerce, as documented in numerous hearings in both the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives and Judiciary Committee of the Senate.

(4) In fact, even before the sale of a handgun, the gun, its component parts, ammunition, and the raw materials from which they are made have considerably moved in interstate commerce.

(5) While criminals freely move from State to State, ordinary citizens may fear to travel to or through certain parts of the country due to the concern that violent crime is not under control, and foreigners may decline to travel in the United States for the same reason.

(6) Just as the hardened drug kingpins begin their life in the illicit drug culture by exposure to drugs at a young age, violent criminals often start their criminal careers on streets where the ready availability of guns to young people results in the acceptability of their random use.

(7) Violent crime and the use of illicit drugs go hand-in-hand, and attempts to control one without controlling the other may be fruitless.

(8) Individual States and localities find it impossible to handle the problem by themselves; even States and localities that have made a strong effort to prevent, detect, and punish crime find their effort unavailing due in part to the failure or inability of other States and localities to take strong measures.

(9) Inasmuch as illicit drug activity and related violent crime overflow State lines and national boundaries, the Congress has power, under the interstate commerce clause and other provisions of the Constitution, to enact measures to combat these problems.

(10) The Congress finds that it is necessary and appropriate to assist the States in controlling crime by stopping the commerce in handguns with juveniles nationwide, and allowing the possession of handguns by juveniles only when handguns are possessed and used for legitimate purposes under appropriate conditions.

"(5) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'juvenile' means a person who is less than 18 years of age.

"(ii) A juvenile is described in this clause if—

"(I) the offense of which the juvenile is charged is possession of a handgun or ammunition in violation of section 922(s)(2); and

"(II) the juvenile has not been convicted in any court of an offense (including an offense under section 922(s) or a similar State law, but not including any other offense consisting of conduct that if engaged in by an adult would not constitute an offense) or adjudicated as a juvenile delinquent for conduct that if engaged in by an adult would constitute an offense.

"(B) A person other than a juvenile who knowingly violates section 922(s)—

"(i) shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both; and

"(ii) if the person sold, delivered, or otherwise transferred a handgun or ammunition to a juvenile knowing or having reasonable cause to know that the juvenile intended to carry or otherwise possess or discharge or otherwise use the handgun or ammunition in the commission of a crime of violence, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.".

"(C) services rendered to the victim or to a person or organization other than the victim.

"(e) When the court finds that more than 1 offender has contributed to the loss of a victim, the court may make each offender liable for payment of the full amount of restitution or may apportion liability among the offenders to reflect the level of contribution and economic circumstances of each offender.

"(f) When the court finds that more than 1 victim has sustained a loss requiring restitution by an offender, the court shall order full restitution of each victim but may provide for different payment schedules to reflect the economic circumstances of each victim.

"(g)(1) If the victim has received or is entitled to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source, the court shall order that restitution be paid to the person who provided or is obligated to provide the compensation, but the restitution order shall provide that all restitution of victims required by the order be paid to the victims before any restitution is paid to such a provider of compensation.

"(2) The issuance of a restitution order shall not affect the entitlement of a victim to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source until the payments actually received by the victim under the restitution order fully compensate the victim for the loss, at which time a person that has provided compensation to the victim shall be entitled to receive any payments remaining to be paid under the restitution order.

"(3) Any amount paid to a victim under an order of restitution shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(h) A restitution order shall provide that—

"(1) all fines, penalties, costs, restitution payments and other forms of transfers of money or property made pursuant to the sentence of the court shall be made by the offender to an entity designated by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts for accounting and payment by the entity in accordance with this subsection;

"(2) the entity designated by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall—

"(A) log all transfers in a manner that tracks the offender's obligations and the current status in meeting those obligations, unless, after efforts have been made to enforce the restitution order and it appears that compliance cannot be obtained, the court determines that continued recordkeeping under this subparagraph would not be useful;

"(B) notify the court and the interested parties when an offender is 90 days in arrears in meeting those obligations; and

"(3) the offender shall advise the entity designated by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts of any change in the offender's address during the term of the restitution order.

"(i) A restitution order shall constitute a lien against all property of the offender and may be recorded in any Federal or State office for the recording of liens against real or personal property.

"(j) Compliance with the schedule of payment and other terms of a restitution order shall be a condition of any probation, parole, or other form of release of an offender. If a defendant fails to comply with a restitution order, the court may revoke probation or a term of supervised release, modify the term or conditions of probation or a term of supervised release, hold the defendant in contempt of court, enter a restraining order or injunction, order the sale of property of the defendant, accept a performance bond, or take any other action necessary to obtain compliance with the restitution order. In determining what action to take, the court shall consider the defendant's employment status, earning ability, financial resources, the willfulness in failing to comply with the restitution order, and any other circumstances that may have a bearing on the defendant's ability to comply with the restitution order.

"(k) An order of restitution may be enforced—

"(1) by the United States—

"(A) in the manner provided for the collection and payment of fines in subchapter (B) of chapter 229 of this title; or

"(B) in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action; and

"(2) by a victim named in the order to receive the restitution, in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action.

"(l) A victim or the offender may petition the court at any time to modify a restitution order as appropriate in view of a change in the economic circumstances of the offender.".

The probation service of the court shall include the information collected in the report of presentence investigation or in a separate report, as the court directs."; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

Subtitle C—Senior Citizens

SEC. 921. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "National Triad Program Act".

SEC. 922. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) senior citizens are among the most rapidly growing segments of our society;

(2) currently, senior citizens comprise 15 percent of our society, and predictions are that by the turn of the century they will constitute 18 percent of our Nation's population;

(3) senior citizens find themselves uniquely situated in our society, environmentally and physically;

(4) many senior citizens are experiencing increased social isolation due to fragmented and distant familial relations, scattered associations, limited access to transportation, and other insulating factors;

(5) physical conditions such as hearing loss, poor eyesight, lessened agility, and chronic and debilitating illnesses often contribute to an older person's susceptibility to criminal victimization;

(6) senior citizens are too frequently the victims of abuse and neglect, violent crime, property crime, consumer fraud, medical quackery, and confidence games;

(7) studies have found that senior citizens that are victims of violent crime are more likely to be injured and require medical attention than are younger victims;

(8) victimization data on crimes against senior citizens are incomplete and out of date, and data sources are partial, scattered, and not easily obtained;

(9) although a few studies have attempted to define and estimate the extent of abuse and neglect of senior citizens, both in their homes and in institutional settings, many experts believe that this crime is substantially underreported and undetected;

(10) similarly, while some evidence suggests that senior citizens may be targeted in a range of fraudulent schemes, neither the Uniform Crime Report nor the National Crime Survey collects data on individual- or household-level fraud;

(11) many law enforcement agencies do not have model practices for responding to the criminal abuse of senior citizens;

(12) law enforcement officers and social service providers come from different disciplines and frequently bring different perspectives to the problem of crimes against senior citizens;

(13) those differences, in turn, can contribute to inconsistent approaches to the problem and inhibit a genuinely effective response;

(14) there are, however, a few efforts currently under way that seek to forge partnerships to coordinate criminal justice and social service approaches to victimization of senior citizens;

(15) the Triad program, sponsored by the National Sheriffs' Association (NSA), the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), and the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), is one such effort; and

(16) recognizing that senior citizens have the same fundamental desire as other members of our society to live freely, without fear or restriction due to the criminal element, the Federal Government should seek to expand efforts to reduce crime against this growing and uniquely vulnerable segment of our population.

SEC. 923. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this subtitle are—

(1) to support a coordinated effort among law enforcement and social service agencies to stem the tide of violence against senior citizens and support media and nonmedia strategies aimed at increasing both public understanding of the problem and the senior citizens' skills in preventing crime against themselves and their property; and

(2) to address the problem of crime against senior citizens in a systematic and effective manner by promoting and expanding collaborative crime prevention programs, such as the Triad model, that assist law enforcement agencies and senior citizens in implementing specific strategies for crime prevention, victim assistance, citizen involvement, and public education.

SEC. 924. NATIONAL ASSESSMENT AND DISSEMINATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the National Institute of Justice shall, subject to the availability of appropriations, conduct a qualitative and quantitative national assessment of—

(1) the nature and extent of crimes committed against senior citizens and the effect of such crimes on the victims;

(2) the numbers, extent, and impact of violent crimes and nonviolent crimes (such as frauds and "scams") against senior citizens and the extent of unreported crime;

(3) the collaborative needs of law enforcement, health, and social service organizations, focusing on prevention of crimes against senior citizens, to identify, investigate, and provide assistance to victims of those crimes; and

(4) the development and growth of strategies to respond effectively to the matters described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3).

(b) MATTERS TO BE ADDRESSED.—The national assessment made pursuant to subsection (a) shall address—

(1) the analysis and synthesis of data from a broad range of sources in order to develop accurate information on the nature and extent of crimes against senior citizens, including identifying and conducting such survey and other data collection efforts as are needed and designing a strategy to keep such information current over time;

(2) institutional and community responses to elderly victims of crime, focusing on the problems associated with fear of victimization, abuse of senior citizens, and hard-to-reach senior citizens who are in poor health, are living alone or without family nearby, or living in high crime areas;

(3) special services and responses required by elderly victims;

(4) whether the experience of senior citizens with some service organizations differs markedly from that of younger populations;

(5) the kinds of programs that have proven useful in reducing victimization of senior citizens through crime prevention activities and programs;

(6) the kinds of programs that contribute to successful coordination among public sector agencies and community organizations in reducing victimization of senior citizens; and

(7) the research agenda needed to develop a comprehensive understanding of the problems of crimes against senior citizens, including the changes that can be anticipated in the crimes themselves and appropriate responses as the society increasingly ages.

(c) Avoidance of Duplication.—In conducting the assessment under subsection (a), the Director of the National Institute of Justice shall draw upon the findings of existing studies and avoid duplication of efforts that have previously been made.

(d) Dissemination.—Based on the results of the national assessment and analysis of successful or promising strategies in dealing with the problems described in subsection (b) and other problems, including coalition efforts such as the Triad programs described in sections 922 and 923, the Director of the National Institute of Justice shall disseminate the results through reports, publications, clearinghouse services, public service announcements, and programs of evaluation, demonstration, training, and technical assistance.

SEC. 925. PILOT PROGRAMS.

(a) Awards.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance shall, subject to the availability of appropriations, make grants to coalitions of local law enforcement agencies and senior citizens to assist in the development of programs and execute field tests of particularly promising strategies for crime prevention services and related services based on the concepts of the Triad model, which can then be evaluated and serve as the basis for further demonstration and education programs.

(b) Triad Cooperative Model.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), a pilot program funded under this section shall consist of the Triad cooperative model developed by the organizations described in section 922(15), which calls for the participation of the sheriff, at least 1 police chief, and a representative of at least 1 senior citizens' organization within a county and may include participation by general service coalitions of law enforcement, victim service, and senior citizen advocate organizations.

(2) If there is not both a sheriff and a police chief in a county or if the sheriff or a police chief do not participate, a pilot program funded under this section shall include in the place of the sheriff or police chief another key law enforcement official in the county such as a local prosecutor.

(c) Application.—A coalition or Triad program that desires to establish a pilot program under this section shall submit to the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance an application that includes—

(1) a description of the community and its senior citizen population;

(2) assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to provide additional and appropriate education and services to the community's senior citizens;

(3) a description of the extent of involvement of each organizational component (chief, sheriff (or other law enforcement official), and senior organization representative) and focus of the Triad program;

(4) a comprehensive plan including—

(A) a description of the crime problems facing senior citizens and need for expanded law enforcement and victim assistance services;

(B) a description of the types of projects to be developed or expanded;

(C) a plan for an evaluation of the results of Triad endeavors;

(D) a description of the resources (including matching funds, in-kind services, and other resources) available in the community to implement the Triad development or expansion;

(E) a description of the gaps that cannot be filled with existing resources;

(F) an explanation of how the requested grant will be used to fill those gaps; and

(G) a description of the means and methods the applicant will use to reduce criminal victimization of older persons; and

(5) funding requirements for implementing a comprehensive plan.

(d) Distribution of Awards.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance shall make awards—

(1) to 17 Triad programs in counties with a population of less than 50,000;

(2) to 17 Triad programs in counties with a population of at least 50,000 but less than 100,000; and

(3) to 16 Triad programs in counties with a population of 100,000 or more.

(e) Post-Grant Period Report.—A grant recipient under this section shall, not later than 6 months after the conclusion of the grant period, submit to the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance a report that—

(1) describes the composition of organizations that participated in the pilot program;

(2) identifies problem areas encountered during the course of the pilot program;

(3) provides data comparing the types and frequency of criminal activity before and after the grant period and the effect of such criminal activity on senior citizens in the community; and

(4) describes the grant recipient's plans and goals for continuance of the Triad program after the grant period.

SEC. 926. TRAINING ASSISTANCE, EVALUATION, AND DISSEMINATION AWARDS.

In conjunction with the national assessment under section 924—

(1) the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance shall make awards to organizations with demonstrated ability to provide training and technical assistance in establishing crime prevention programs based on the Triad model, for purposes of aiding in the establishment and expansion of pilot programs under this section; and

(2) the Director of the National Institute of Justice shall make awards to research organizations, for the purposes of—

(A) evaluating the effectiveness of selected pilot programs; and

(B) conducting the research and development identified through the national assessment as being critical; and

(3) the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance shall make awards to public service advertising coalitions, for the purposes of mounting a program of public service advertisements to increase public awareness and understanding of the issues surrounding crimes against senior citizens and promoting ideas or programs to prevent them.

(ii) Clause (i) shall not be construed to preclude counting a participant's previous period of law enforcement experience for purposes other than satisfaction of the requirements of section 9, such as for purposes of determining such a participant's pay and other benefits, rank, and tenure.

(3) It is the intent of this chapter that there shall be no more than 20,000 participants in each graduating class. The Director shall approve State plans providing in the aggregate for such enrollment of applicants as shall assure, as nearly as possible, annual graduating classes of 20,000. In a year in which applications are received in a number greater than that which will produce, in the judgment of the Director, a graduating class of more than 20,000, the Director shall, in deciding which applications to grant, give preference to those who will be participating in State plans that provide law enforcement personnel to areas of greatest need.

(c) RECRUITMENT OF MINORITIES.—Each State participating in the Police Corps program shall make special efforts to seek and recruit applicants from among members of all racial, ethnic or gender groups. This subsection does not authorize an exception from the competitive standards for admission established pursuant to subsections (a) and (b).

(d) ENROLLMENT OF APPLICANT.—(1) An applicant shall be accepted into a State Police Corps program on the condition that the applicant will be matriculated in, or accepted for admission at, a 4-year institution of higher education—

(2) If the applicant is not matriculated or accepted as set forth in paragraph (1), the applicant's acceptance in the program shall be revoked.

(e) LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—(1) A participant in a State Police Corps program who requests a leave of absence from educational study, training or service for a period not to exceed 1 year (or 18 months in the aggregate in the event of multiple requests) due to temporary physical or emotional disability shall be granted such leave of absence by the State.

(2) A participant who requests a leave of absence from educational study, training or service for a period not to exceed 1 year (or 18 months in the aggregate in the event of multiple requests) for any reason other than those listed in paragraph (1) may be granted such leave of absence by the State.

(3) A participant who requests a leave of absence from educational study or training for a period not to exceed 30 months to serve on an official church mission may be granted such leave of absence.

SEC. 1128. POLICE CORPS TRAINING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Director shall establish programs of training for Police Corps participants. Such programs may be carried out at up to 3 training centers established for this purpose and administered by the Director, or by contracting with existing State training facilities. The Director shall contract with a State training facility upon request of such facility if the Director determines that such facility offers a course of training substantially equivalent to the Police Corps training program described in this chapter.

(2) The Director may enter into contracts with individuals, institutions of learning, and government agencies (including State and local police forces) to obtain the services of persons qualified to participate in and contribute to the training process.

(3) The Director may enter into agreements with agencies of the Federal Government to utilize on a reimbursable basis space in Federal buildings and other resources.

(4) The Director may authorize such expenditures as are necessary for the effective maintenance of the training centers, including purchases of supplies, uniforms, and educational materials, and the provision of subsistence, quarters, and medical care to participants.

(b) TRAINING SESSIONS.—A participant in a State Police Corps program shall attend two 8-week training sessions at a training center, one during the summer following completion of sophomore year and one during the summer following completion of junior year. If a participant enters the program after sophomore year, the participant shall complete 16 weeks of training at times determined by the Director.

(c) FURTHER TRAINING.—The 16 weeks of Police Corps training authorized in this section is intended to serve as basic law enforcement training but not to exclude further training of participants by the State and local authorities to which they will be assigned. Each State plan approved by the Director under section 10 shall include assurances that following completion of a participant's course of education each participant shall receive appropriate additional training by the State or local authority to which the participant is assigned. The time spent by a participant in such additional training, but not the time spent in Police Corps training, shall be counted toward fulfillment of the participant's 4-year service obligation.

(d) COURSE OF TRAINING.—The training sessions at training centers established under this section shall be designed to provide basic law enforcement training, including vigorous physical and mental training to teach participants self-discipline and organizational loyalty and to impart knowledge and understanding of legal processes and law enforcement.

(e) EVALUATION OF PARTICIPANTS.—A participant shall be evaluated during training for mental, physical, and emotional fitness, and shall be required to meet performance standards prescribed by the Director at the conclusion of each training session in order to remain in the Police Corps program.

(b) RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES.—A participant shall have all of the rights and responsibilities of and shall be subject to all rules and regulations applicable to other members of the police force of which the participant is a member, including those contained in applicable agreements with labor organizations and those provided by State and local law.

(c) DISCIPLINE.—If the police force of which the participant is a member subjects the participant to discipline such as would preclude the participant's completing 4 years of service, and result in denial of educational assistance under section 1126, the Director may, upon a showing of good cause, permit the participant to complete the service obligation in an equivalent alternative law enforcement service and, if such service is satisfactorily completed, section 1126(d)(1)(B)(iii) shall not apply.

(d) LAYOFFS.—If the police force of which the participant is a member lays off the participant such as would preclude the participant's completing 4 years of service, and result in denial of educational assistance under section 1126, the Director may permit the participant to complete the service obligation in an equivalent alternative law enforcement service and, if such service is satisfactorily completed, section 1126(d)(1)(B)(iii) shall not apply.

SEC. 1130. STATE PLAN REQUIREMENTS.

A State Police Corps plan shall—

(1) provide for the screening and selection of participants in accordance with the criteria set out in section 1127;

(6) provide that no participant shall be assigned to serve with a local police force—

(A) whose size has declined by more than 5 percent since June 21, 1989; or

(7) provide that participants shall be placed and to the extent feasible kept on community and preventive patrol;

(8) ensure that participants will receive effective training and leadership;

(9) provide that the State may decline to offer a participant an appointment following completion of Federal training, or may remove a participant from the Police Corps program at any time, only for good cause (including failure to make satisfactory progress in a course of educational study) and after following reasonable review procedures stated in the plan; and

(10) provide that a participant shall, while serving as a member of a police force, be compensated at the same rate of pay and benefits and enjoy the same rights under applicable agreements with labor organizations and under State and local law as other police officers of the same rank and tenure in the police force of which the participant is a member.

SEC. 1131. ASSISTANCE TO STATES AND LOCALITIES EMPLOYING POLICE CORPS OFFICERS.

(1) the owner of a motor vehicle may voluntarily sign a consent form with a participating State or locality in which the motor vehicle owner—

(A) states that the vehicle is not normally operated under certain specified conditions; and

(B) agrees to—

(i) display program decals or devices on the owner's vehicle; and

(ii) permit law enforcement officials in any State to stop the motor vehicle and take reasonable steps to determine whether the vehicle is being operated by or with the permission of the owner, if the vehicle is being operated under the specified conditions; and

(2) participating States and localities authorize law enforcement officials in the State or locality to stop motor vehicles displaying program decals or devices under specified conditions and take reasonable steps to determine whether the vehicle is being operated by or with the permission of the owner.

(b) UNIFORM DECAL OR DEVICE DESIGNS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The motor vehicle theft prevention program developed pursuant to this section shall include a uniform design or designs for decals or other devices to be displayed by motor vehicles participating in the program.

(2) TYPE OF DESIGN.—The uniform design shall—

(A) be highly visible; and

(B) explicitly state that the motor vehicle to which it is affixed may be stopped under the specified conditions without additional grounds for establishing a reasonable suspicion that the vehicle is being operated unlawfully.

(c) VOLUNTARY CONSENT FORM.—The voluntary consent form used to enroll in the program shall—

(1) clearly state that participation in the program is voluntary;

(2) clearly explain that participation in the program means that, if the participating vehicle is being operated under the specified conditions, law enforcement officials may stop the vehicle and take reasonable steps to determine whether it is being operated by or with the consent of the owner, even if the law enforcement officials have no other basis for believing that the vehicle is being operated unlawfully;

(3) include an express statement that the vehicle is not normally operated under the specified conditions and that the operation of the vehicle under those conditions would provide sufficient grounds for a prudent law enforcement officer to reasonably believe that the vehicle was not being operated by or with the consent of the owner; and

(4) include any additional information that the Attorney General may reasonably require.

(d) SPECIFIED CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH STOPS MAY BE AUTHORIZED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall promulgate rules establishing the conditions under which participating motor vehicles may be authorized to be stopped under this section. (B) the operation of the vehicle under other circumstances that would provide a sufficient basis for establishing a reasonable suspicion that the vehicle was not being operated by the owner, or with the consent of the owner.

(2) MORE THAN ONE SET OF CONDITIONS.—The Attorney General may establish more than one set of conditions under which participating motor vehicles may be stopped. If more than one set of conditions is established, a separate consent form and a separate design for program decals or devices shall be established for each set of conditions. The Attorney General may choose to satisfy the requirement of a separate design for program decals or devices under this paragraph by the use of a design color that is clearly distinguishable from other design colors.

(3) NO NEW CONDITIONS WITHOUT CONSENT.—After the program has begun, the conditions under which a vehicle may be stopped if affixed with a certain decal or device design may not be expanded without the consent of the owner.

(4) LIMITED PARTICIPATION BY STATES AND LOCALITIES.—A State or locality need not authorize the stopping of motor vehicles under all sets of conditions specified under the program in order to participate in the program.

(e) MOTOR VEHICLES FOR HIRE.—

(1) NOTIFICATION TO LESSEES.—Any person who is in the business of renting or leasing motor vehicles and who rents or leases a motor vehicle on which a program decal or device is affixed shall, prior to transferring possession of the vehicle, notify the person to whom the motor vehicle is rented or leased about the program.

(2) TYPE OF NOTICE.—The notice required by this subsection shall—

(A) be in writing;

(B) be in a prominent format to be determined by the Attorney General; and

(C) explain the possibility that if the motor vehicle is operated under the specified conditions, the vehicle may be stopped by law enforcement officials even if the officials have no other basis for believing that the vehicle is being operated unlawfully.

(3) FINE FOR FAILURE TO PROVIDE NOTICE.—Failure to provide proper notice under this subsection shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed $5,000.

(f) NOTIFICATION OF POLICE.—As a condition of participating in the program, a State or locality must agree to take reasonable steps to ensure that law enforcement officials throughout the State or locality are familiar with the program, and with the conditions under which motor vehicles may be stopped under the program.

(1) the scope of "exhibition of the genitals or pubic area" in section 2256(2)(E), in the definition of "sexually explicit conduct", is not limited to nude exhibitions or exhibitions in which the outlines of those areas were discernible through clothing; and

(2) the requirements in section 2252(a) (1)(A), (2)(A), (3)(B)(i), and (4)(B)(i) that the production of a visual depiction involve the use of a minor engaging in "sexually explicit conduct" of the kind described in section 2256(2)(E) are satisfied if a person photographs a minor in such a way as to exhibit the child in a lascivious manner.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that in filing its brief in United States v. (a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) an adequately supported Federal judiciary is essential to the enforcement of law and order in the United States,

(2) section 331 of title 28 provides in pertinent part that the Chief Justice shall submit to Congress an annual report of the proceedings of the Judicial Conference and its recommendations for legislation,

(3) in 1990, in response to the recommendations of the Judicial Conference for additional judgeships, Congress enacted legislation creating 85 additional judgeships with an effective date of December 1, 1990,

(4) during the previous administration, it took an average of 502 days from the time a judgeship became vacant until such vacancy was filled,

(5) the enactment of legislation providing additional funding for the investigation and prosecution facets of the criminal justice system has a direct and positive impact on the needs and workload of the Judiciary, which is already severely overloaded with criminal cases,

(6) recommendations by the Judicial Conference for the filling of judicial vacancies are currently made on the basis of historical data alone,

(7) the General Accounting Office, pursuant to the 1988 Anti-Drug Abuse Act, has developed a computer model that measures the potential effect of fiscal increases on one or more parts of the criminal justice system on the Judiciary,

(8) the General Accounting Office has established that an increase in the resources allocated to the investigative and prosecutorial parts of the criminal justice system, brings about an increase in the number of criminal cases filed, which in turn adds to the need for additional judgeships,

(9) the allocation of resources to portions of the Federal criminal justice system other than the Judiciary contributes to the need for additional judgeships that cannot be anticipated by the use of historical data alone, and

(10) the use of historical data alone, because of its inability to project the need for additional judgeships attributable to the increase in criminal caseload adds to the delay in meeting the needs of the Judiciary.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the Judicial Conference should be encouraged to make its recommendations to Congress for additional judgeships utilizing historical data and a workload estimate model designed to anticipate an increase in criminal filings resulting from increased funding in one or more components of the Federal criminal justice system, and to take into account the time expended in the appointive and confirmation process.

"(A) crime, particularly crime involving drugs and guns, is a pervasive, nationwide problem;

"(B) crime at the local level is exacerbated by the interstate movement of drugs, guns, and criminal gangs;

"(C) firearms and ammunition move easily in interstate commerce and have been found in increasing numbers in and around schools, as documented in numerous hearings in both the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives and Judiciary Committee of the Senate;

"(D) in fact, even before the sale of a firearm, the gun, its component parts, ammunition, and the raw materials from which they are made have considerably moved in interstate commerce;

"(E) while criminals freely move from State to State, ordinary citizens and foreign visitors may fear to travel to or through certain parts of the country due to concern about violent crime and gun violence, and parents may decline to send their children to school for the same reason;

"(F) the occurrence of violent crime in school zones has resulted in a decline in the quality of education in our country;

"(G) this decline in the quality of education has an adverse impact on interstate commerce and the foreign commerce of the United States;

"(H) States, localities, and school systems find it almost impossible to handle gun-related crime by themselves; even States, localities, and school systems that have made strong efforts to prevent, detect, and punish gun-related crime find their efforts unavailing due in part to the failure or inability of other States or localities to take strong measures; and

"(I) Congress has power, under the interstate commerce clause and other provisions of the Constitution, to enact measures to ensure the integrity and safety of the Nation's schools by enactment of this subsection.".

"(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

"Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases

"(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

"(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

"(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

"(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

"(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At the hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.".

Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At the hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence that the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for the purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether the condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2) that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant and not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, the evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence that may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider—

"§2264. Restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding section 3663, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) An order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim (through the appropriate court mechanism) the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) A restitution order under this section is mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(C) If the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim for the victim's other losses before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit and shall provide the victim with an affidavit form which may be used to do so.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this subsection, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers.

"(4) If the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegee) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such an order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes the person harmed as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court, but in no event shall the defendant be named as such a representative or guardian.

"(A) the court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of the State; and

"(B) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process.

"(2) In the case of an order under paragraph (1) that is issued ex parte, notice and opportunity to be heard shall be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

"(c) CROSS- OR COUNTER-PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

"(1) no cross- or counter-petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

TITLE XXXIV—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 3401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Civil Rights Remedies for Gender-Motivated Violence Act".

SEC. 3402. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes of violence motivated by gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim's right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for crimes of violence motivated by gender committed on the street or in the home;

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of crimes of violence motivated by gender, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of crimes of violence motivated by gender of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) crimes of violence motivated by gender have a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) crimes of violence motivated by gender have a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects on interstate commerce caused by crimes of violence motivated by gender; and

(8) the victims of crimes of violence motivated by gender have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHT TO BE FREE FROM CRIMES OF VIOLENCE.—All persons within the United States shall have the right to be free from crimes of violence motivated by gender (as defined in subsection (d)).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—A person (including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State) who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the right declared in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as a court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means a crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and due, at least in part, to an animus based on the victim's gender;

(2) the term "crime of violence" means—

(A) an act or series of acts that would constitute a felony against the person or that would constitute a felony against property if the conduct presents a serious risk of physical injury to another, and that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States; and

(B) includes an act or series of acts that would constitute a felony described in subparagraph (A) but for the relationship between the person who takes such action and the individual against whom such action is taken.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be motivated by gender (within the meaning of subsection (d)).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

(3) CONCURRENT JURISDICTION.—The Federal and State courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction over actions brought pursuant to this title.

(4) PENDENT JURISDICTION.—Neither section 1367 of title 28, United States Code, nor subsection (c) of this section shall be construed, by reason of a claim arising under such subsection, to confer on the courts of the United States jurisdiction over any State law claim seeking the establishment of a divorce, alimony, equitable distribution of marital property, or child custody decree.

(5) LIMITATION ON REMOVAL.—Section 1445 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) A civil action in any State court arising under section 3402 of the Violence Against Women Act of 1993 may not be removed to any district court of the United States.".

SEC. 3403. ATTORNEY'S FEES.

Section 722 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended in the last sentence—

(1) by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318,"; and

(2) by inserting ", or title XXXIV of the Violence Against Women Act of 1993," after "1964".

SEC. 3404. SENSE OF THE SENATE CONCERNING PROTECTION OF THE PRIVACY OF RAPE VICTIMS.

(a) FINDINGS AND DECLARATION.—The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) there is a need for a strong and clear Federal response to violence against women, particularly with respect to the crime of rape;

(2) rape is an abominable and repugnant crime, and one that is severely underreported to law enforcement authorities because of its stigmatizing nature;

(3) the victims of rape are often further victimized by a criminal justice system that is insensitive to the trauma caused by the crime and are increasingly victimized by news media that are insensitive to the victim's emotional and psychological needs;

(4) rape victims' need for privacy should be respected;

(5) rape victims need to be encouraged to come forward and report the crime of rape without fear of being revictimized through involuntary public disclosure of their identities;

(6) rape victims need a reasonable expectation that their physical safety will be protected against retaliation or harassment by an assailant;

(7) the news media should, in the exercise of their discretion, balance the public's interest in knowing facts reported by free news media against important privacy interests of a rape victim, and an absolutist view of the public interest leads to insensitivity to a victim's privacy interest; and

(8) the public's interest in knowing the identity of a rape victim is small compared with the interests of maintaining the privacy of rape victims and encouraging rape victims to report and assist in the prosecution of the crime of rape.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that news media, law enforcement officers, and other persons should exercise restraint and respect a rape victim's privacy by not disclosing the victim's identity to the general public or facilitating such disclosure without the consent of the victim.

TITLE XXXIX—SENIOR CITIZENS AGAINST MARKETING SCAMS

SEC 3901. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Senior Citizens Against Marketing Scams Act of 1993".

SEC. 3902. FINDINGS AND DECLARATION.

The Congress makes the following findings and declaration:

(1) Unprecedented Federal law enforcement investigations have uncovered a national network of illicit telemarketing operations.

(2) Most of the telemarketing industry is legitimate, employing over 3,000,000 people through direct and indirect means.

(3) Illicit telemarketers, however, are an increasing problem which victimizes our Nation's senior citizens in disproportionate numbers.

(4) Interstate telemarketing fraud has become a problem of such magnitude that the resources of the Department of Justice are not sufficient to ensure that there is adequate investigation of, and protection from, such fraud.

(5) Telemarketing differs from other sales activities in that it can be carried out by sellers across State lines without direct contact. Telemarketers can also be very mobile, easily moving from State to State.

(6) It is estimated that victims lose billions of dollars a year as a result of telemarketing fraud.

(7) Consequently, Congress should enact legislation that will—

(A) enhance Federal law enforcement resources;

(B) ensure adequate punishment for telemarketing fraud; and

(C) educate the public.

"(B) participation in a contest or sweepstakes, by use of 1 or more interstate telephone calls initiated either by a person who is conducting the plan, program, promotion, or campaign or by a prospective purchaser or contest or sweepstakes participant; but

"(2) does not include the solicitation of sales through the mailing of a catalog that—

"(A) contains a written description or illustration of the goods or services offered for sale;

"(B) includes the business address of the seller;

"(C) includes multiple pages of written material or illustration; and

"(D) has been issued not less frequently than once a year, if the person making the solicitation does not solicit customers by telephone but only receives calls initiated by customers in response to the catalog and during those calls take orders without further solicitation.

"§2326. Enhanced penalties

"An offender that is convicted of an offense under 1028, 1029, 1341, 1342, 1343, or 1344 in connection with the conduct of telemarketing—

"(1) may be imprisoned for a term of 5 years in addition to any term of imprisonment imposed under any of those sections, respectively; and

"(2) in the case of an offense under any of those sections that—

"(A) victimized ten or more persons over the age of 55; or

"(B) targeted persons over the age of 55,

may be imprisoned for a term of 10 years in addition to any term of imprisonment imposed under any of those sections, respectively.

"§2327. Restitution

TITLE XL—CHILD SAFETY

SEC. 4001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Child Safety Act".

SEC. 4002. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) The problem of family violence does not necessarily cease when the victimized family is legally separated, divorced, or otherwise not sharing a household. During separation and divorce, family violence often escalates, and child custody and visitation become the new forum for the continuation of abuse.

(2) Some perpetrators use the children as pawns to control the abused party after the couple is separated.

(3) Every year an estimated 1,000 to 5,000 children are killed by their parents in the United States.

(4) In 1988, the Department of Justice reported that 354,100 children were abducted by family members who violated custody agreements or decrees. Most victims were children from ages 2 to 11 years.

(5) Approximately 160,000 children are seriously injured or impaired by abuse or neglect each year.

(6) Studies by the American Humane Association indicate that reports of child abuse and neglect have increased by over 200 percent from 1976 to 1986.

(7) Approximately 90 percent of children in homes in which their mothers are abused witness the abuse.

(8) Data indicates that women and children are at elevated risk for violence during the process of and after separation.

(9) Fifty to 70 percent of men who abuse their spouses or partners also abuse their children.

(10) Up to 75 percent of all domestic assaults reported to law enforcement agencies were inflicted after the separation of the couples.

(11) In one study of spousal homicide, over half of the male defendants were separated from their victims.

(12) Seventy-three percent of battered women seeking emergency medical services do so after separation.

SEC. 4003. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this Act is to authorize funding to enable supervised visitation centers to provide the following:

(1) Supervised visitation in cases where there is documented sexual, physical or emotional abuse as determined by the appropriate court.

(2) Supervised visitation in cases where there is suspected or elevated risk of sexual, physical or emotional abuse, or where there have been threats of parental abduction of the child.

(3) Supervised visitation for children who have been placed in foster homes as a result of abuse.

(4) An evaluation of visitation between parents and children for child protection social services to assist such service providers in making determinations of whether the children should be returned to a previously abusive home.

(5) A safe location for custodial parents to temporarily transfer custody of their children with non-custodial parents, or to provide a protected visitation environment, where there has been a history of domestic violence or an order for protection is involved.

(6) An additional safeguard against the child witnessing abuse or a safeguard against the injury or death of a child or parent.

(7) An environment for families to have healthy interaction activities, quality time, non-violent memory building experiences during visitation to help build the parent/child relationship.

(8) Parent and child education and support groups to help parents heal and learn new skills, and to help children heal from past abuse.

SEC. 4004. DEMONSTRATION GRANTS FOR SUPERVISED VISITATION CENTERS.

Other individuals may be permitted to utilize the services provided by the center on a fee basis.

(2) Costs.—To the extent practicable, the Secretary shall ensure that, with respect to recipients of grants, contracts or agreements under this section, the perpetrators of the family violence, abuse or neglect will be responsible for any and all costs associated with the supervised visitation undertaken at the center.

(4) in cases of spouse or partner abuse only, the extent to which supervised visitation should be predicated on participation by the abusive spouse in a specialized treatment program.

(b) Application.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section an entity shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including documentary evidence to demonstrate that the entity possesses a high level of clinical expertise and experience in child abuse treatment and prevention as they relate to visitation. (a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(3) a significant number of children are born shortly before or during the incarceration of their mothers and are then quickly separated from their mothers, preventing the parent-child bonding that is crucial to developing in children a sense of security and trust;

(4) maintaining close relationships with their children provides a powerful incentive for prisoners to participate in and successfully benefit from rehabilitative programs; and

(5) maintaining strong family ties during imprisonment has been shown to decrease recidivism, thereby reducing prison costs.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to evaluate the effectiveness of certain demonstration projects in helping to—

(1) alleviate the harm to children and primary caretaker parents caused by separation due to the incarceration of the parents;

TITLE XLVI—RECREATIONAL HUNTING SAFETY

SEC. 4601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Recreational Hunting Safety and Preservation Act of 1993".

SEC. 4602. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) recreational hunting, when carried out pursuant to law (as implemented by the regulations of Federal and State wildlife management agencies) is a necessary and beneficial element in the proper conservation and management of healthy, abundant, and biologically diverse wildlife resources;

(2) recreational hunters (because of a generally demonstrated concern with the conservation of wildlife resources and preservation of habitat necessary for the breeding and maintenance of healthy wildlife populations, and through a familiarity with the resources gained from experience in the field) are a valuable asset in ensuring enlightened public input into decisions regarding management and maintenance programs for wildlife resources and habitat;

(3)(A) recreational hunting supports industries highly significant to the national economy through sales in interstate commerce of sporting goods; and

(B) the Federal excise taxes imposed on the sales provide a major source of funding for vital programs of wildlife conservation and management;

(4) various persons are engaging in (and have announced an intent to continue to engage in) a variety of disruptive activities with the premeditated purpose of preventing and interfering with the conduct of lawful recreational hunting on Federal lands, which activities—

(A) place both recreational hunters and the disruptive persons in imminent jeopardy of grave physical injury or death;

(B) disrupt the peaceful, lawful, and prudent conduct of wildlife population and habitat management programs by Federal and State wildlife management agencies; and

(C) ultimately may alter the planned program objectives, resulting in—

(i) undesirable patterns of activity within populations of wildlife;

(ii) the endangerment of the future viability of wildlife species; and

(iii) damage to habitat values;

(5) Federal lands comprise important wildlife habitat resources that—

(A) support many large, diverse, and vital populations of wildlife; and

(B) offer significant opportunities for legal recreational hunting as an important management tool to ensure the future viability of the wildlife populations;

(6) it is the right of citizens of the United States freely to enjoy lawful recreational hunting on Federal lands in accordance with regulations promulgated by Federal and State wildlife management agencies; and

(7) in many instances under current law, vagueness and ambiguity exist regarding the application of State laws and enforcement activities relating to—

(A) the safety of hunters; and

(B) the legal rights of recreational hunters to participate peacefully in lawful hunts on Federal lands.

SEC. 4603. DEFINITIONS.

TITLE XLVII—Correctional Job Training and Placement

SEC. 4701. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Office of Correctional Job Training and Placement Act of 1993".

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) job training and placement are important to, and make a significant contribution to, the readjustment to society of incarcerated persons and ex-offenders; and

(d) ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall establish within the Department of Justice an Office of Correctional Job Training and Placement. The Office shall be headed by a Director, who shall be appointed by the Attorney General.

(2) TIMING.—The Attorney General shall carry out this subsection not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this section.

(e) FUNCTIONS OF OFFICE.—The Attorney General, acting through the Director of the Office of Correctional Job Training and Placement, in consultation with the Secretary of Labor, shall—

(1) assist in coordinating the activities of the Federal Bonding Program of the Department of Labor, the activities of the Department of Labor related to the determination of targeted jobs credits under section 51 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to ex-offenders, and any other correctional job training or placement program of the Department of Justice or Department of Labor;

TITLE XLVIII—POLICE PARTNERSHIPS FOR CHILDREN

SEC. 4801. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Police Partnerships for Children Act of 1993".

SEC. 4802. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Homicide is the second leading cause of juvenile injury deaths for all youth 15 to 24 years of age.

(2) Homicide rates for children and youth have more than doubled since 1950.

(3) Teenagers are more than twice as likely as adults to be victims of violent crime, such as rape, robbery or assault.

(4) Physical fighting severe enough to require medical treatment for at least one participant occurs among high school students in patterns similar to those of homicide. The incidence rates of such physical fighting are higher for males than females, higher for minorities than for nonminorities, and more frequent between acquaintances than among strangers.

(5) Children increasingly live amidst chronic community violence and experience trauma as a result of such violence. One survey of inner-city children 6 to 10 years of age found that over 90 percent had witnessed some type of violence. A Chicago housing project survey found that virtually all children in such survey had firsthand experiences with shootings by the age of 5.

(6) Children who have been the victims of, or who have witnessed violence, are at risk of becoming involved in further violence if the trauma such children have experienced is not addressed.

(7) Police frequently encounter children who have been the victims of violence or who have witnessed violence in the course of the police work, but the police often lack the resources necessary to adequately respond to such children's needs. Child and family service agencies have expertise in child development and family issues that could support police efforts.

(8) Community-based police, by their visibility at the neighborhood level and their engagement in benign activities, can provide role models and resources to promote the well-being of children and families, as well as to identify and refer those at risk for behavioral problems.

SEC. 4803. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this title are to—

(1) augment law enforcement services and community policing efforts by providing accessible crisis intervention services for children who are involved in violent incidents, and training for law enforcement officers in child development, family, and cultural issues;

(2) identify children and families at high risk for developing behavioral or emotional problems resulting from exposure to community violence and provide mental health and other support services to such children and families, including crisis intervention for child witnesses and victims of violence;

(3) facilitate interaction between law enforcement agencies, child and family service organizations, local educational agencies, and other community members for the purpose of building coalitions for the prevention of community violence; and

(4) provide role models for high-risk children and youth and promote conflict resolution training for children and youth in local educational agencies.

SEC. 4804. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title:

(1) CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICE ORGANIZATION.—The term "child and family service organization" means a public or private nonprofit entity (such as child guidance centers, child psychiatry or child psychology departments of hospitals or university medical centers, or community mental health centers providing child and family services) that provides mental health services to children and families and that meets nationally recognized guidelines (such as guidelines prescribed for mental health centers and for child welfare and family service agencies) with respect to the services provided to children and families.

(2) COMMUNITY-BASED POLICING.—The term "community-based policing" means a commitment and an effort (within the confines of budget restrictions) made by a law enforcement agency to establish or expand cooperative efforts between the police and a community in order to increase police presence in the community, including—

(D) Community activities for children and families that are designed jointly by the law enforcement and child and family services partnership, including conflict resolution training programs for children and youth, after-school activity and neighborhood recreation programs, and parent support groups co-led by child guidance and law enforcement professionals.

(6) The partnership will provide local matching funds in accordance with the Federal share requirements under section 4805(c).

(7) The applicant will submit to the Attorney General, for each fiscal year for which a grant is received, a report in accordance with uniform standards prescribed by the Attorney General.

(c) ADDITIONAL ASSURANCES FOR MENTORING AND CONFLICT RESOLUTION SERVICES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each application submitted under subsection (a) for additional funding for the provision of mentoring or conflict resolution services under section 4805(b)(2) shall provide assurances described in paragraph (2) or (3), whichever is applicable.

(2) MENTORING.—With respect to the provision of mentoring services, an applicant shall provide assurances that the partnership of the applicant and the child and family service organization will—

The support provided to the LEA in the preceding sentence shall be tailored to the needs and resources of the local school district, and may include providing assistance to an ongoing conflict resolution program operated by such LEA, developing curricula for such a program in cooperation with the LEA, and providing such a program to an LEA.

SEC. 5131. ASYLUM.

(2) this flood of asylum claims has swamped the system, creating delays in the processing of applications of up to several years;

(3) the delay in processing asylum claims due to the overwhelming numbers has contributed to numerous problems, including—

(A) an abuse of the asylum laws by fraudulent applicants whose primary interest is obtaining work authority in the United States while their claim languishes in the backlogged asylum processing system;

(B) the growth of alien smuggling operations, often involving organized crime;

(C) a drain on limited resources resulting from the high cost of processing frivolous asylum claims through our multi-layered system; and

(D) an erosion of public support for asylum, which is a treaty obligation.

(5) a comprehensive revision of our asylum law and procedures is required to address these problems.

(b) POLICY.—It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) asylum is a process intended to protect aliens in the United States who, because of events occurring after their arrival here, cannot safely return home;

(2) persons outside their country of nationality who have a well-founded fear of persecution if they return should apply for refugee status at one of our refugee processing offices abroad;

(3) the immigration, refugee and asylum laws of the United States should be reformed to provide—

(A) a procedure for the expeditious exclusion of any asylum applicant who arrives at a port-of-entry with fraudulent documents, or no documents, and makes a non-credible claim of asylum; and

(B) the immigration, refugee and asylum laws of the United States should be reformed to provide for a streamlined affirmative asylum processing system for asylum applicants who make their application after they have entered the United States.

SEC. 5141. SENSE OF THE SENATE.

(a) DECLARATIONS.—The Congress declares that—

(1) it is the stated purpose of this Act, in part, to rehire law enforcement officers who have been laid off as a result of State and local budget reductions in community-oriented policing and to hire new, additional career law enforcement officers for deployment in community-oriented policing across the Nation;

(2) this affirms that local law enforcement must remain the sole prerogative of local government under their respective jurisdictions and authorities;

(3) a key element to fighting crime in America is to put more police officers on the street, and the Senate, in an effort to help the States and localities hire additional police officers in the short term, will, through the trust fund established by this Act, make funds available to local units of government for this purpose;

(4) The Senate should not add to the financial burden on local communities is reduced so that essential local services can be paid for by local government;

(5) the United States Conference of Mayors, on October 27, 1993, issued a study outlining the cost of just 10 unfunded Federal mandates on the reporting cities, and found the cost to those cities to be $54,000,000,000.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) local law enforcement must remain the sole prerogative of local government under their respective jurisdictions and authorities; and

(2) one way of providing more funds to units of local government for law enforcement is to aggressively address the issue of unfunded Federal mandates.

SEC. 5142. CHILD-CENTERED ACTIVITIES.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Community Schools Youth Services and Supervision Grant Program Act of 1993".

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) public-private partnerships between government and community-based organizations offer an opportunity to—

(A) empower distressed and disconnected communities to develop their resources and abilities in order to meet the needs of children;

(B) forge innovative solutions to the challenges confronting the development of the children in such communities; and

(C) create environments where children grow up learning a healthy respect for themselves, for neighbors, and for their communities;

(2) increased resources should be invested in public-private partnerships; and

(3) community-based organizations, acting through such public-private partnerships—

(A) should provide year-round supervised sports programs, and extracurricular and academic programs, for children in the communities; and

(B) in providing such extracurricular and academic programs, should promote the positive character development of such children through programs such as curriculum-based supervised educational, work force preparation, entrepreneurship, cultural, and health programs, social activities, arts and crafts programs, dance programs, tutorial and mentoring programs, and other related activities.

(c) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) parents are devoting less time than in previous generations to the supervision, education, and nurturing of their children;

(2) the lack of supervision and meaningful activity after school contributes to the spread of violent juvenile delinquency in the form of youth and gang violence, drug trafficking, dangerous and self-destructive behavior, and lack of hope among children in our Nation;

(3) every child has the capacity to be productive and law abiding and deserves to grow in a safe and protected environment;

(4) communities have a responsibility to develop the children of our Nation into productive adults;

(5) because of their centrality, public schools are among the best facilities that communities can use to provide needed space and support services for programs for children;

(6) schools are most effective at serving a community when the people of the community are involved in activities designed to fulfill the needs of children in the community; and

(7) activities provided in community centers, recreational facilities, and other places where children gather, have a significant impact and influence on the behavior and attitudes of children.

(3) Dr. Lee Rainwater of Harvard University predicts that the rate will reach 40 percent within 7 years.

(4) Professor James Q. Wilson has described the erosion of the family structure in the United States and many Western nations as "a major cultural convulsion" that is inextricably associated with the rise of violent urban crime.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

Such fees shall be deposited as an offsetting collection to the Commission's appropriation and shall remain available until expended. EXPRESSING THE SENSE-OF-THE-CONGRESS THAT U.S. TRUCK SAFETY STANDARDS ARE OF PARAMOUNT IMPORTANCE TO THE IMPLEMENTATION OF NAFTA

The text of the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 36) expressing the sense of the Congress that U.S. truck safety standards are of paramount importance to the implementation of the North American Free-Trade Agreement, as agreed to by the Senate on November 20, 1993, is as follows:

S. CON. RES. 36

Whereas the North American Free Trade Agreement in requiring the United States, Mexico, and Canada to "harmonize" their trucking safety standards should ensure the continuing application of vital United States safety standards;

Whereas the North American Free Trade Agreement will permit Mexican trucking companies and Mexican drivers to operate in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California after 3 years and throughout the United States after 6 years;

Whereas the United States truck driver fatigue rules limit drivers to 10 hours per day behind the wheel, Canada allows 13 hours without rest, and Mexico has no limitations on truck driver time;

Whereas front brakes are required on United States trucks but are not required on Mexican trucks, and the lack of front brakes reduces stopping ability and increases a truck's susceptibility to jackknifing;

Whereas the United States maximum gross vehicle weight limit is 80,000 pounds without a special permit, compared to 137,000 pounds in Canada and 171,000 pounds in Mexico;

Whereas Mexico does not have a truck driver records system and the Canadian system does not link with the United States system, thereby making it impossible for enforcement officials in the United States to identify suspended or revoked drivers, or drivers with disqualifying offenses such as drunk, drugged, or reckless driving; and

Whereas only the United States requires industry-wide random testing for drugs and alcohol: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the intent of the Congress that the Secretary of Transportation, in carrying out harmonization negotiations under the auspices of the Land Transportation Standards Subcommittee established under article 913 of the North American Free Trade Agreement, shall uphold all United States truck safety standards, including truck sizes and weights, and safety standards such as truck driver hours of service, front brake and other safety equipment requirements, and the truck driver record system.

The text of the bill (S. 994) to authorize the establishment of fresh cut flowers and fresh cut greens promotion and consumer information program for the benefit of the floricultural industry, and other persons, and for other purposes, as passed by the Senate on November 20, 1993, is as follows:

S. 994

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE AND TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Fresh Cut Flowers and Fresh Cut Greens Promotion and Information Act of 1993".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title and table of contents.
Sec. 2. Findings and declaration of policy.
Sec. 3. Definitions.
Sec. 4. Issuance of orders.
Sec. 5. Required terms in orders.
Sec. 6. Exclusion; determinations.
Sec. 7. Referenda.
Sec. 8. Petition and review.
Sec. 9. Enforcement.
Sec. 10. Investigations and power to subpoena.
Sec. 11. Confidentiality.
Sec. 12. Authority for Secretary to suspend or terminate order.
Sec. 13. Construction.
Sec. 14. Regulations.
Sec. 15. Authorization of appropriations.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF POLICY.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) fresh cut flowers and fresh cut greens are an integral part of life in the United States, are enjoyed by millions of persons every year for a multitude of special purposes (especially important personal events), and contribute a natural and beautiful element to the human environment;

(2)(A) cut flowers and cut greens are produced by many individual producers throughout the United States as well as in other countries, and are handled and marketed by thousands of small-sized and medium-sized businesses; and

(B) the production, handling, and marketing of cut flowers and cut greens constitute a key segment of the United States horticultural industry and thus a significant part of the overall agricultural economy of the United States;

(3) handlers play a vital role in the marketing of cut flowers and cut greens in that handlers—

(A) purchase most of the cut flowers and cut greens marketed by producers;

(B) prepare the cut flowers and cut greens for retail consumption;

(C) serve as an intermediary between the source of the product and the retailer;

(D) otherwise facilitate the entry of cut flowers and cut greens into the current of domestic commerce; and

(E) add efficiencies to the market process that ensure the availability of a much greater variety of the product to retailers and consumers;

(4) it is widely recognized that it is in the public interest and important to the agricultural economy of the United States to provide an adequate, steady supply of cut flowers and cut greens at reasonable prices to the consumers of the United States;

(5)(A) cut flowers and cut greens move in interstate and foreign commerce; and

(B) cut flowers and cut greens that do not move in interstate or foreign channels of commerce but only in intrastate commerce directly affect interstate commerce in cut flowers and cut greens;

(6) the maintenance and expansion of markets in existence on the date of enactment of this Act, and the development of new or improved markets or uses for cut flowers and cut greens, are needed to preserve and strengthen the economic viability of the domestic cut flowers and cut greens industry for the benefit of producers, handlers, retailers, and the entire floral industry;

(7) generic programs of promotion and consumer information can be effective in maintaining and developing markets for cut flowers and cut greens, and have the advantage of equally enhancing the market position for all cut flowers and cut greens;

(8) because cut flowers and cut greens producers are primarily agriculture-oriented rather than promotion-oriented, and because the floral marketing industry within the United States is comprised mainly of small-sized and medium-sized businesses, the development and implementation of an adequate and coordinated national program of generic promotion and consumer information necessary for the maintenance of markets in existence on the date of enactment of this Act and the development of new markets for cut flowers and cut greens have been prevented;

(9) there exist established State and commodity-specific producer-funded programs of promotion and research that are valuable efforts to expand markets for domestic producers of cut flowers and cut greens and that will benefit from the promotion and consumer information program authorized by this Act in that the program will enhance the market development efforts of the programs for domestic producers;

(10) an effective and coordinated method for ensuring cooperative and collective action in providing for and financing a nationwide program of generic promotion and consumer information is needed to ensure that the cut flowers and cut greens industry will be able to provide, obtain, and implement programs of promotion and consumer information necessary to maintain, expand, and develop markets for cut flowers and cut greens; and

(11) the most efficient method of financing such a nationwide program is to assess cut flowers and cut greens at the point at which the flowers and greens are sold by handlers into the retail market.

(b) POLICY AND PURPOSE.—It is the policy of Congress that it is in the public interest, and it is the purpose of this Act, to authorize the establishment, through the exercise of the powers provided in this Act, of an orderly procedure for the development and financing (through an adequate assessment on cut flowers and cut greens sold by handlers to retailers and related entities in the United States) of an effective and coordinated program of generic promotion, consumer information, and related research designed to strengthen the position of the cut flowers and cut greens industry in the marketplace and to maintain, develop, and expand markets for cut flowers and cut greens.

LIME RESEARCH ACT

The text of the bill (S. 1766) to amend the Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Act of 1990 to cover seedless and not seeded limes, to increase the exemption level, to delay the initial referendum date, and to alter the composition of the Lime Board, and for other purposes, as passed by the Senate on November 20, 1993, is as follows:

S. 1766

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Improvement Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Act of 1990 was enacted on November 28, 1990, for the purpose of establishing an orderly procedure for the development and financing of an effective and coordinated program of research, promotion, and consumer information to strengthen the domestic and foreign markets for limes.

(2) The lime research, promotion, and consumer information order required by such Act became effective on January 27, 1992.

(3) Although the intent of such Act was to cover seedless limes, the definition of the term "lime" in section 1953(6) of such Act applies to seeded limes. Therefore, the Act and the order need to be revised before a research, promotion, and consumer information program on seedless limes can go into effect.

(4) Since the enactment of the Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Act of 1990, the United States production of fresh market limes has plummeted and the volume of imports has risen dramatically. The drop in United States production is primarily due to damage to lime orchards in the State of Florida by Hurricane Andrew in August 1992. United States production is not expected to reach pre-Hurricane Andrew levels for possibly two to three years because a majority of the United States production of limes is in Florida.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purpose of this Act is—

(1) to revise the definition of the term "lime" in order to cover seedless and not seeded limes;

(2) to increase the exemption level;

(3) to delay the initial referendum date; and

(4) to alter the composition of the Lime Board.

SEC. 3. DEFINITION OF LIME.

Section 1953(6) of the Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 6202(6)) is amended by striking "citrus aurantifolia" and inserting "citrus latifolia".

SEC. 4. REQUIRED TERMS IN ORDERS.

(a) COMPOSITION OF LIME BOARD.—Subsection (b) of section 1955 of the Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 6204) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(A), by striking "7" and inserting "3";

(2) in paragraph (2)(B), by striking "7" and inserting "3";

(3) in paragraph (2)(F), by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The Secretary shall terminate the initial Board established under this subsection as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of the Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Improvement Act."; and

(4) by inserting after paragraph (2)(F) the following new paragraph:

"(G) BOARD ALLOCATION.—The producer and importer representation on the Board shall be allocated on the basis of 2 producer members and 1 importer member from the district east of the Mississippi River and 1 producer member and 2 importer members from the district west of the Mississippi River.".

(b) TERMS OF MEMBERS.—Subsection (b)(4) of such section is amended—

(1) by striking "The Secretary" and all that follows through "shall—" and inserting "The initial members of the Board appointed under the amended order shall serve a term of 30 months. Subsequent appointments to the Board shall be for a term of 3 years, except that—";

(2) in subparagraph (A), by striking "3" and inserting "2";

(3) in subparagraph (B), by striking "4" and inserting "2"; and

(4) in subparagraph (C), by striking "4" and inserting "3".

(c) DE MINIMIS EXCEPTION.—Subsection (d)(5) of such section is amended by striking "35,000" each place it appears and inserting "200,000".

SEC. 5. INITIAL REFERENDUM.

Section 1960(a) of the Lime Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 6209(a)) is amended by striking "Not later than 2 years after the date on which the Secretary first issues an order under section 1954(a)," and inserting "Not later than 30 months after the date on which the collection of assessments begins under the order pursuant to section 1955(d),".

SEC. 104. DELTA REGION HERITAGE CORRIDORS AND HERITAGE AND CULTURAL CENTERS.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) in 1990, the Congress authorized the Institute of Museum Services to prepare a report assessing the needs of small, emerging, minority, and rural museums in order to identify the resources such museums needed to meet their education mission, to identify the areas of museum operation in which the needs were greatest, and to make recommendations on how these needs could best be met;

(2) the Institute of Museum Services undertook a comprehensive eighteen month study of such needs with the assistance of two advisory groups, surveyed 524 museums from throughout the Nation, held discussion groups in which representatives of 25 museum groups participated, and conducted case studies of 12 museum facilities around the Nation;

(3) on the basis of this assessment, the Institute of Museum Services issued a report in September 1992, entitled, "National Needs Assessment of Small, Emerging, Minority and Rural Museums in the United States" (hereinafter "National Needs Assessment") which found that small, emerging, minority, and rural museums provide valuable educational and cultural resources for their communities and contain a reservoir of the Nation's material, cultural and scientific heritage, but due to inadequate resources are unable to meet their full potential or the demands of the surrounding communities;

(4) the needs of these institutions are not being met through existing Federal programs;

(5) fewer than half of the participants in the survey had applied for Federal assistance in the past two years and that many small, emerging, minority and rural museums believe existing Federal programs do not meet their needs;

(6) based on the National Needs Assessment, that funding agencies should increase support available to small, emerging, minority, and rural museums and make specific recommendations for increasing technical assistance in order to identify such institutions and provide assistance to facilitate their participation in Federal programs;

(7) the Delta Initiatives Report made specific recommendations for the creation and development of centers for the preservation of the cultural, historical, scientific and literary heritage of the Delta Region, including recommendations for the establishment of a Delta Region Native American Heritage and Cultural Center and a Delta Region African American Heritage and Cultural Center with additional satellite centers or museums linked throughout the Delta Region;

(8) the Delta Initiatives Report stated that new ways of coordinating, preserving, and promoting the Delta Region's literature, art, and music should be established including the creation of a network to promote the Delta Region's literary, artistic, and musical heritage; and

(9) wholesale destruction and attrition of archeological sites and structures has eliminated a significant portion of Native American heritage as well as the interpretive potential of the Delta Region's parks and museums. Furthermore, site and structure destruction is so severe that an ambitious program of site and structure acquisition in the Delta Region is necessary.

(b) GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the States of the Delta Region, the Chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, the Chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Director of the Smithsonian Institution, the Lower Mississippi Delta Development Center, Historically Black Colleges and Universities, other Delta Regional educational institutions, and appropriate African American and Native American organizations in the Delta Region, is further directed to prepare and transmit to the Congress a plan outlining specific recommendations, including recommendations for necessary funding, for the establishment of a Delta Region Native American Heritage Corridor and Heritage and Cultural Center with a network of satellite or cooperative units.

(c) DELTA REGION NATIVE AMERICAN HERITAGE CORRIDOR AND CULTURAL CENTER.—(1) The plan referred to in subsection (b) of this section shall include recommendations for establishing a network of parks, museums, and other centers to interpret Native American culture and heritage in the Delta Region, including a ten year development strategy for such a network.

(2) Such plan shall include specific proposals for the development of a Native American Heritage Corridor and Heritage and Cultural Center in the Delta Region, along with recommendations for the appropriate Federal role in such a center including matching grants, technical and interpretive assistance.

(3) Such plan shall be conducted in consultation with tribal leaders in the Delta Region.

Section 1212 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13317) is amended by inserting immediately after "foregoing," the following: "by the Tennessee Valley Authority,".

HIGH RISK DRIVERS ACT

The text of the bill (S. 738) to promote the implementations of programs to improve the traffic safety performance of high-risk drivers, as passed by the Senate on November 20, 1993, is as follows:

S. 738

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "High Risk Drivers Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Nation's traffic fatality rate has declined from 5.5 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles traveled in 1966 to an historic low of an estimated 1.8 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles traveled during 1992. In order to further this desired trend, the safety programs and policies implemented by the Department of Transportation must be continued, and at the same time, the focus of these efforts as they pertain to high risk drivers of all ages must be strengthened.

(2) Motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of death among teenagers, and teenage drivers tend to be at fault for their fatal crashes more often than older drivers. Drivers who are 16 to 20 years old comprised 7.4 percent of the United States population in 1991 but were involved in 15.4 percent of fatal motor vehicle crashes. Also, on the basis of crashes per 100,000 licensed drivers, young drivers are the highest risk group of drivers.

(3) During 1991, 6,630 teenagers from age 15 through 20 died in motor vehicle crashes. This tragic loss demands that the Federal Government intensify its efforts to promote highway safety among members of this high risk group.

(4) The consumption of alcohol, speeding over allowable limits or too fast for road conditions, inadequate use of occupant restraints, and other high risk behaviors are several of the key causes for this tragic loss of young drivers and passengers. The Department of Transportation, working cooperatively with the States, student groups, and other organizations, must reinvigorate its current programs and policies to address more effectively these pressing problems of teenage drivers.

(5) In 1991 individuals aged 70 years and older, who are particularly susceptible to injury, were involved in 12 percent of all motor vehicle traffic crash fatalities. These deaths accounted for 4,828 fatalities out of 41,462 total traffic fatalities.

(6) The number of older Americans who drive is expected to increase dramatically during the next 30 years. Unfortunately, during the last 15 years, the Department of Transportation has supported an extremely limited program concerning older drivers. Research on older driver behavior and licensing has suffered from intermittent funding at amounts that were insufficient to address the scope and nature of the challenges ahead.

(7) A major objective of United States transportation policy must be to promote the mobility of older Americans while at the same time ensuring public safety on our Nation's highways. In order to accomplish these two objectives simultaneously, the Department of Transportation must support a vigorous and sustained program of research, technical assistance, evaluation, and other appropriate activities that are designed to reduce the fatality and crash rate of older drivers who have identifiable risk characteristics.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act, the following definitions apply:

(1) The term "high risk driver" means a motor vehicle driver who belongs to a class of drivers that, based on vehicle crash rates, fatality rates, traffic safety violation rates, and other factors specified by the Secretary, presents a risk of injury to the driver and other individuals that is higher than the risk presented by the average driver.

(2) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Transportation.

SEC. 4. POLICY AND PROGRAM DIRECTION.

(a) GENERAL RESPONSIBILITY OF SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall develop and implement effective and comprehensive policies and programs to promote safe driving behavior by young drivers, older drivers, and repeat violators of traffic safety regulations and laws.

(b) SAFETY PROMOTION ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary shall promote or engage in activities that seek to ensure that—

(1) cost effective and scientifically-based guidelines and technologies for the nondiscriminatory evaluation and licensing of high risk drivers are advanced;

(2) model driver training, screening, licensing, control, and evaluation programs are improved;

(3) uniform or compatible State driver point systems and other licensing and driver record information systems are advanced as a means of identifying and initially evaluating high risk drivers; and

(4) driver training programs and the delivery of such programs are advanced.

(c) DRIVER TRAINING RESEARCH.—The Secretary shall explore the feasibility and advisability of using cost efficient simulation and other technologies as a means of enhancing driver training; shall advance knowledge regarding the perceptual, cognitive, and decision making skills needed for safe driving and to improve driver training; and shall investigate the most effective means of integrating licensing, training, and other techniques for preparing novice drivers for the safe use of highway systems.

TITLE I—YOUNG DRIVER PROGRAMS

SEC. 101. STATE GRANTS FOR YOUNG DRIVER PROGRAMS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF GRANT PROGRAM.—Chapter 4 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 411. Programs for young drivers

Such grants may only be used by recipient States to implement and enforce such measures.

"(b) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—No grant may be made to a State under this section in any fiscal year unless such State enters into such agreements with the Secretary as the Secretary may require to ensure that such State will maintain its aggregate estimated expenditures from all other sources for programs for young drivers at or above the average level of such expenditures in its 2 fiscal years preceding the fiscal year in which this section is enacted.

"(c) FEDERAL SHARE.—No State may receive grants under this section in more than 5 fiscal years. The Federal share payable for any grant under this section shall not exceed—

"(2) in the second fiscal year the State receives a grant under this section, 50 percent of the cost of implementing and enforcing in such fiscal year such program; and

"(3) in the third, fourth, and fifth fiscal years the State receives a grant under this section, 25 percent of the cost of implementing and enforcing in such fiscal year such program.

"(d) MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF BASIC GRANTS.—Subject to subsection (c), the amount of a basic grant made under this section for any fiscal year to any State which is eligible for such a grant under subsection (e) shall equal 30 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title. A grant to a State under this section shall be in addition to the State's apportionment under section 402, and basic grants during any fiscal year may be proportionately reduced to accommodate an applicable statutory obligation limitation for that fiscal year.

"(e) ELIGIBILITY FOR BASIC GRANTS.—

"(1) GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a basic grant if such State—

"(A) establishes and maintains a graduated licensing program for drivers under 18 years of age that meets the requirements of paragraph (2); and

"(B)(i) in the first year of receiving grants under this section, meets four of the nine criteria specified in paragraph (3);

"(ii) in the second year of receiving such grants, meets five of such criteria;

"(iii) in the third year of receiving such grants, meets six of such criteria;

"(iv) in the fourth year of receiving such grants, meets seven of such criteria; and

"(v) in fifth year of receiving such grants, meets seven of such criteria.

"(2) GRADUATED LICENSING PROGRAM.—(A) A State receiving a grant under this section shall establish and maintain a graduated licensing program consisting of the following licensing stages for any driver under 18 years of age:

"(i) An instructional license, valid for a minimum period determined by the Secretary, under which the licensee shall not operate a motor vehicle unless accompanied in the front passenger seat by the holder of a full driver's license.

"(ii) A provisional driver's license which shall not be issued unless the driver has passed a written examination on traffic safety and has passed a roadtest administered by the driver licensing agency of the State.

"(iii) A full driver's license which shall not be issued until the driver has held a provisional license for at least 1 year with a clean driving record.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(iii), subsection (f)(1), and subsection (f)(6)(B), a provisional licensee has a clean driving record if the licensee—

"(i) has not been found, by civil or criminal process, to have committed a moving traffic violation during the applicable period;

"(ii) has not been assessed points against the license because of safety violations during such period; and

"(iii) has satisfied such other requirements as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation.

"(C) The Secretary shall determine the conditions under which a State shall suspend provisional driver's licenses in order to be eligible for a basic grant. At a minimum, the holder of a provisional license shall be subject to driver control actions that are stricter than those applicable to the holder of a full driver's license, including warning letters and suspension at a lower point threshold.

"(D) For a State's first 2 years of receiving a grant under this section, the Secretary may waive the clean driving record requirement of subparagraph (A)(iii) if the State submits satisfactory evidence of its efforts to establish such a requirement.

"(3) CRITERIA FOR BASIC GRANT.—The nine criteria referred to in paragraph (1)(B) are as follows:

"(A) The State requires that any driver under 21 years of age with a blood alcohol concentration of 0.02 percent or greater when driving a motor vehicle shall be deemed to be driving while intoxicated for the purpose of (i) administrative or judicial sanctions or (ii) a law or regulation that prohibits any individual under 21 years of age with a blood alcohol concentration of 0.02 percent or greater from driving a motor vehicle.

"(B) The State has a law or regulation that provides a mandatory minimum penalty of at least $500 for anyone who in violation of State law or regulation knowingly, or without checking for proper identification, provides or sells alcohol to any individual under age 21 years of age.

"(C) The State requires that all front seat and rear seat occupants of any motor vehicle shall use safety belts.

"(D) The State requires that the license of a driver under 21 years of age be suspended for a period specified by the State if such driver is convicted of the unlawful purchase or public possession of alcohol. The period of suspension shall be at least 6 months for a first conviction and at least 12 months for a subsequent conviction; except that specific license restrictions may be imposed as an alternative to such minimum periods of suspension where necessary to avoid undue hardship on any individual.

"(E) The State conducts youth-oriented traffic safety enforcement activities, and education and training programs—

"(i) with the participation of judges and prosecutors, that are designed to ensure enforcement of traffic safety laws and regulations including those that prohibit drivers under 21 years of age from driving while intoxicated, restrict the unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, and establish other moving violations; and

"(ii) with the participation of student and youth groups, that are designed to ensure compliance with such traffic safety laws and regulations.

"(F) The State is a member of and substantially complies with the interstate agreement known as the Driver License Compact, promptly and reliably transmits and receives through electronic means interstate driver record information (including information on commercial drivers) in cooperation with the Secretary and other States, and develops and achieves demonstrable annual progress in implementing a plan to ensure that (i) each court of the State report expeditiously to the State driver licensing agency all traffic safety convictions, license suspensions, license revocations, or other license restrictions, and driver improvement efforts sanctioned or ordered by the court, and that (ii) such records be available electronically to appropriate government officials (including enforcement, officers, judges, and prosecutors) upon request at all times.

"(G) The State prohibits the possession of any open alcoholic beverage container, or the consumption of any alcoholic beverage, in the passenger area of any motor vehicle located on a public highway or the right-of-way of a public highway; except as allowed in the passenger area, by persons (other than the driver), of a motor vehicle designed to transport more than 10 passengers (including the driver) while being used to provide charter transportation of passengers.

"(H) The State has a law or regulation that provides a minimum penalty of at least $100 for anyone who in violation of State law or regulation drives any vehicle through, around, or under any crossing, gate, or barrier at a railroad crossing while such gate or barrier is closed or being opened or closed.

"(I) The State has a law or regulation that—

"(i) mandates seizure by the State or any political subdivision thereof of any vehicle driven by an individual in violation of an alcohol-related traffic safety law, if such violator has been convicted on more than one occasion of an alcohol-related traffic offense within any 5-year period beginning after the date of enactment of this section, or has been convicted of driving while his or her driver's license is suspended or revoked by reason of a conviction for such an offense;

"(ii) mandates that the vehicle be forfeited to the State or a political subdivision thereof if the vehicle was solely owned by such violator at the time of the violation;

"(iii) requires that the vehicle be returned to the owner if the vehicle was a stolen vehicle at the time of the violation; and

"(iv) authorizes the vehicle to be released to a member of such violator's family, the co-owner, or the owner, if the vehicle was not a stolen vehicle and was not solely owned by such violator at the time of the violation, and if the family member, co-owner, or owner, prior to such release, executes a binding agreement that the family member, co-owner, or owner will not permit such violator to drive the vehicle and that the vehicle shall be forfeited to the State or a political subdivision thereof in the event such violator drives the vehicle with the permission of the family member, co-owner, or owner.

"(5) Remedial driver education.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a supplemental grant for a fiscal year in an amount, subject to subsection (c), not to exceed 5 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title if such State is eligible for a basic grant and in addition such State requires, at a lower point threshold than for other drivers, remedial driver improvement instruction for drivers under 21 years of age and requires such remedial instruction for any driver under 21 years of age who is convicted of reckless driving, excessive speeding, driving under the influence of alcohol, or driving while intoxicated.

"(6) Provisional license requirement after license suspension or revocation.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a supplemental grant for a fiscal year in an amount, subject to subsection (c), not to exceed 5 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title if such State is eligible for a basic grant and in addition such State requires that any driver whose driving privilege is restored after license suspension or revocation resulting from a traffic safety violation shall for at least 1 year be subject to the following:

"(A) The restored license shall be immediately suspended, for a period to be determined by the Secretary, upon the driver's conviction of any moving traffic safety violation, except that the Secretary may by regulation define limited circumstances under which the State may waive this immediate suspension requirement.

"(B) A full driver's license shall be issued only after the driver has held a provisional license for at least 1 year with a clean driving record, as described in subsection (e)(2)(B).

"(g) Applicability of Chapter 1.—

"(1) In general.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, all provisions of chapter 1 of this title that are applicable to National Highway System funds, other than provisions relating to the apportionment formula and provisions limiting the expenditure of such funds to the Federal-aid systems, shall apply to the funds authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section.

The report shall include any related recommendations by the Secretary for legislative changes.

TITLE II—OLDER DRIVER PROGRAMS

SEC. 201. OLDER DRIVER SAFETY RESEARCH.

(a) RESEARCH ON PREDICTABILITY OF HIGH RISK DRIVING.—(1) The Secretary shall conduct a program that funds, within budgetary limitations, the research challenges presented in the Transportation Research Board's report entitled "Research and Development Needs for Maintaining the Safety and Mobility of Older Drivers" and the research challenges pertaining to older drivers presented in a report to Congress by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration entitled "Addressing the Safety Issues Related to Younger and Older Drivers".

(2) To the extent technically feasible, the Secretary shall consider the feasibility and further the development of cost efficient, reliable tests capable of predicting increased risk of accident involvement or hazardous driving by older high risk drivers.

(b) SPECIALIZED TRAINING FOR LICENSE EXAMINERS.—The Secretary shall encourage and conduct research and demonstration activities to support the specialized training of license examiners or other certified examiners to increase their knowledge and sensitivity to the transportation needs and physical limitations of older drivers, including knowledge of functional disabilities related to driving, and to be cognizant of possible countermeasures to deal with the challenges to safe driving that may be associated with increasing age.

(c) COUNSELING PROCEDURES AND CONSULTATION METHODS.—The Secretary shall encourage and conduct research and disseminate information to support and encourage the development of appropriate counseling procedures and consultation methods with relatives, physicians, the traffic safety enforcement and the motor vehicle licensing communities, and other concerned parties. Such procedures and methods shall include the promotion of voluntary action by older high risk drivers to restrict or limit their driving when medical or other conditions indicate such action is advisable. The Secretary shall consult extensively with the American Association of Retired Persons, the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, the American Occupational Therapy Association, the American Automobile Association, the Department of Health and Human Services, the American Public Health Association, and other interested parties in developing educational materials on the interrelationship of the aging process, driver safety, and the driver licensing process.

(d) ALTERNATIVE TRANSPORTATION MEANS.—The Secretary shall ensure that the agencies of the Department of Transportation overseeing the various modes of surface transportation coordinate their policies and programs to ensure that funds authorized under the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240; 105 Stat. 1914) and implementing Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriation Acts take into account the transportation needs of older Americans by promoting alternative transportation means whenever practical and feasible.

(e) STATE LICENSING PRACTICES.—The Secretary shall encourage State licensing agencies to use restricted licenses instead of canceling a license whenever such action is appropriate and if the interests of public safety would be served, and to closely monitor the driving performance of older drivers with such licenses. The Secretary shall encourage States to provide educational materials of benefit to older drivers and concerned family members and physicians. The Secretary shall promote licensing and relicensing programs in which the applicant appears in person and shall promote the development and use of cost effective screening processes and testing of physiological, cognitive, and perception factors as appropriate and necessary. Not less than one model State program shall be evaluated in light of this subsection during each of the fiscal years 1996 through 1998. Of the sums authorized under subsection (i), $250,000 is authorized for each such fiscal year for such evaluation.

(f) IMPROVEMENT OF MEDICAL SCREENING.—The Secretary shall conduct research and other activities designed to support and encourage the States to establish and maintain medical review or advisory groups to work with State licensing agencies to improve and provide current information on the screening and licensing of older drivers. The Secretary shall encourage the participation of the public in these groups to ensure fairness and concern for the safety and mobility needs of older drivers.

(g) INTELLIGENT VEHICLE-HIGHWAY SYSTEMS.—In implementing the Intelligent Vehicle-Highway Systems Act of 1991 (23 U.S.C. 307 note), the Secretary shall ensure that the National Intelligent Vehicle-Highway Systems Program devotes sufficient attention to the use of intelligent vehicle-highway systems to aid older drivers in safely performing driver functions. Federally-sponsored research, development, and operational testing shall ensure the advancement of night vision improvement systems, technology to reduce the involvement of older drivers in accidents occurring at intersections, and other technologies of particular benefit to older drivers.

(h) TECHNICAL EVALUATIONS UNDER INTERMODAL SURFACE TRANSPORTATION EFFICIENCY ACT.—In conducting the technical evaluations required under section 6055 of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240; 105 Stat. 2192), the Secretary shall ensure that the safety impacts on older drivers are considered, with special attention being devoted to ensuring adequate and effective exchange of information between the Department of Transportation and older drivers or their representatives.

(i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the funds authorized under section 403 of title 23, United States Code, $1,250,000 is authorized for each of the fiscal years 1995 through 2000, and $1,500,000 is authorized for each of the fiscal years 2001 through 2005, to support older driver programs described in subsections (a), (b), (c), (e), and (f).

TITLE III—HIGH RISK DRIVERS

SEC. 301. STUDY ON WAYS TO IMPROVE TRAFFIC RECORDS OF ALL HIGH RISK DRIVERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall complete a study to determine whether additional or strengthened Federal activities, authority, or regulatory actions are desirable or necessary to improve or strengthen the driver record and control systems of the States to identify high risk drivers more rapidly and ensure prompt intervention in the licensing of high risk drivers. The study, which shall be based in part on analysis obtained from a request for information published in the Federal Register, shall consider steps necessary to ensure that State traffic record systems are unambiguous, accurate, current, accessible, complete, and (to the extent useful) uniform among the States.

(b) SPECIFIC MATTERS FOR CONSIDERATION.—Such study shall at a minimum consider—

(1) whether specific legislative action is necessary to improve State traffic record systems;

(2) the feasibility and practicality of further encouraging and establishing a uniform traffic ticket citation and control system;

(3) the need for a uniform driver violation point system to be adopted by the States;

(4) the need for all the States to participate in the Driver License Reciprocity Program conducted by the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators;

(5) ways to encourage the State to cross-reference driver license files and motor vehicle files to facilitate the identification of individuals who may not be in compliance with driver licensing laws; and

(6) the feasibility of establishing a national program that would limit each driver to one driver's license from only one State at any time.

(c) EVALUATION OF NATIONAL INFORMATION SYSTEMS.—As part of the study required by this section, the Secretary shall consider and evaluate the future of the national information systems that support driver licensing. In particular, the Secretary shall examine whether the Commercial Driver's License Information System, the National Driver Register, and the Driver License Reciprocity program should be more closely linked or continue to exist as separate information systems and which entities are best suited to operate such systems effectively at the least cost. The Secretary shall cooperate with the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators in carrying out this evaluation.

SEC. 302. STATE PROGRAMS FOR HIGH RISK DRIVERS.

The Secretary shall encourage and promote State driver evaluation, assistance, or control programs for high risk drivers. These programs may include in-person license reexaminations, driver education or training courses, license restrictions or suspensions, and other actions designed to improve the operating performance of high risk drivers.

So the bill (H.R. 486) was deemed read a third time and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND].

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, we have just passed the Truman Farm Home bill, a measure which has come over on this side. I cosponsored it with Senator DANFORTH.

We are indeed grateful for the leadership of Chairman BUMPERS and assistance of Senators WALLOP and MURKOWSKI.

Mr. President, when a large part of the original Truman Farm in Grandview, MO was sold to developers, Truman was quoted in the Kansas City Star as saying; "I sure hate to see the old place go." Happily, action just completed by the House and now with the concurrence of the Senate, what historian David McCullough characterized as "a national treasure" will be added to the Harry S. Truman National Historic Site preserving it for all to share.

The historical significance of the Truman Farm Home is no longer in question. Most recently, inclusion of the Truman Farm Home was endorsed by David McCullough in a letter to Chairman BUMPERS that I would like unanimous consent to enter as part of the RECORD.

As those who have studied the life of President Truman well know, Truman was a real farmer. Truman lived and worked on the farm from 1905 until he left for the Army in 1917. As many have testified, the significance of the Truman Farm Home is it's integral role in shaping the character and values of the future President. It has here he learned to nurture, to preserve, to persevere, to appreciate the goodness of humanity and that one must first sow before one can reap.

He recognized that working from the soil brings man closer to integrating the basics of what is fundamental and God given. He knew that the internal rewards associated with farm life are what turns life into living and he valued it through and beyond his Presidency.

Mr. President, I thank a number of people who pushed this legislation. In particular, I thank Mr. Robert Eller from Grandview who is the president of the Truman Farm Home and who testified earlier this year on behalf of this legislation. At his own expense he traveled to Washington to do so. He is one of the devoted and knowledgeable volunteers who have worked diligently to protect this important historical site. Additionally, thanks should go to David McCullough and his daughter Dorie who gives every appearance of being just the kind of daughter a distinguished historian might rely upon.

In the Senate, I especially thank Chairman BUMPERS. His knowledge of President Truman rivals that of even the proudest Missourian and we would not be here today if not for his support of this legislation. Finally, thanks to Senators WALLOP and MURKOWSKI and my congratulates to Senator DANFORTH with whom I have worked for some time to render passage of this legislation.

Mr. President, I thank the Senator for helping our Nation preserve this historical treasure where Truman learned what it took to understand the "heat in the kitchen"—a quality he later applied so brilliantly as President during one of history's most critical periods.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter from David McCullough, biographer of President Truman be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JULY 29, 1993.

DEAR CHAIRMAN BUMPERS: I am writing to urge you and your committee to give full support to the bill S-845 that would save the old Truman family homeplace at Grandview, Missouri, and make it part of the National Park Service operation that maintains the Truman home in Independence.

The importance of the Truman farmhouse, in the life of President Truman, and in what it says about our country, could not be greater. The two most formative experiences of his life were his service in France in World War I and his years on the farm. It was there, in the house at Grandwiew, that he lived with his mother, father, and sister for eleven years, up every morning to work the long days as a partner in the family enterprise, in all seasons, beset often by drought, insect plague, falling prices, and always with a load of debt.

It was there on the farm his mother liked to say, that, "Harry got his common sense." It was there, writing to the love of his life, Bess Wallace of Independence, that he poured out the events of his days, his ideas and his heart's desire in hundreds of letters that fortunately have survived, letters that tell us so much about him and about a whole vanished way of life in rural America. It was there, in a house without electricity or running water, that young Harry held the lantern while a country doctor operated on his mother, there that he watched over his father in his dying hour, John Truman having literally worked himself to death.

Some supposedly historic houses have in fact been of only marginal importance in the life of the past Americans they honor. This is not one of those and its preservation is entirely in the national interest.

Harry Truman was not the avocational kind of farmer who never pulled a weed, or never knew the satisfactions and pride of being truly a farmer. He was in this, as in so much else in his life, the real thing. Further, his years on the farm, from 1906 to 1917, coincided with what historians call "The Golden Age" of American agriculture. His grandfather had pioneered the land when it was unbroken prairie. He and his family were living still the Jefferson ideal. He himself often expressed that ideal in the long letters to Bess Wallace, and he would, when the time came, leave the plow and go to war in the spirit of Cincinnatus, another of his heroes.

If the walls of that small plain, seemingly ordinary house could speak, they would have the most American of stories to tell. So let us make sure it is properly preserved. Let the house stand as a symbol of the strength and pride and bedrock decency of the "good farmer," as Truman might have said. It is a national treasure.

Respectfully,

DAVID MCCULLOUGH.

Mr. BOND. I thank the Chair.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar 314, S. 1070, a bill to prohibit cash awards to certain Federal officers.

TRIBAL SELF-GOVERNANCE ACT OF 1993

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar Order No. 332, S. 1618, a bill to establish tribal self-governance.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the title of the bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1618) to establish Tribal Self-Governance, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment; as follows:

(The parts of the bill intended to be stricken are shown in boldface brackets and the parts of the bill intended to be inserted are shown in italics.)

S. 1618

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Tribal Self-Governance Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the tribal right of self-governance flows from the inherent sovereignty of Indian tribes and nations;

(2) the United States recognizes a special government-to-government relationship with Indian tribes, including the right of the tribes to self-governance, as reflected in the Constitution, treaties, Federal statutes, and the course of dealings of the United States Government with Indian tribes;

(3) although progress has been made, the Federal bureaucracy, with its centralized rules and regulations, has eroded tribal self-governance and dominates tribal affairs;

(4) the Tribal Self-Governance Demonstration Project was designed to improve and perpetuate the government-to-government relationship between Indian tribes and the United States, and to strengthen tribal control over Federal funding and program management; and

(5) Congress has reviewed the results of the Tribal Self-Governance Demonstration Project and finds that—

(A) transferring control to tribal governments, upon tribal request, over funding and decisionmaking for Federal programs, services, functions, and activities intended to benefit Indians, is an effective way to implement the Federal policy of government-to-government relations with Indian tribes; and

(B) transferring control to tribal governments, upon tribal request, over funding and decisionmaking for Federal programs, services, functions, and activities strengthens the Federal policy of Indian self-determination.

SEC. 3. DECLARATION OF POLICY.

It is the policy of this Act to permanently establish and implement Self-Governance—

(1) to enable the United States to maintain and improve its unique and continuing relationship with, and responsibility to, Indian tribes;

(2) to permit each Indian tribe to choose the extent of the participation of such tribe in Self-Governance;

(3) to co-exist with the provisions of the Indian Self-Determination Act relating to provision of Indian services by designated Federal agencies;

(4) to ensure the continuation of the trust responsibility of the United States to Indian tribes and Indian individuals;

(5) to permit an orderly transition from Federal domination of programs and services to provide Indian tribes with meaningful authority to plan, conduct, redesign, and administer programs, services, functions, and activities that meet the needs of the individual tribal communities; and

(6) to provide for an orderly transition through a planned and measurable parallel reduction in the Federal bureaucracy.

SEC. 4. TRIBAL SELF-GOVERNANCE.

The Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE IV—TRIBAL SELF-GOVERNANCE

"SEC. 408. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this title.".

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, on November 4, 1993, I introduced S. 1618, the Tribal Self-Governance Act of 1993. I have been joined in this effort by Senators Inouye, Murkowski, Gorton, Simon, Wellstone, Durenberger, Campbell, and Reid.

S. 1618 would establish self-governance as a permanent policy within the Department of the Interior and would provide the opportunity for an annual increase in the number of self-governance tribes. In addition, the bill would provide authority for the Secretary of the Interior to promulgate regulations by adapting the general requirements of the Negotiated Rulemaking Act of 1990, as amended (Public Law 101-648).

Mr. President, since 1988 the Department of the Interior has conducted self-governance under demonstration authority. The goal of this demonstration project was to examine the benefits of allowing Indian tribal governments to assume more control over programs and services to their members which are now largely provided through the Bureau of Indian Affairs [BIA]. The project permits participating tribes to enter into compacts for self-governance and annual funding agreements with the Federal Government. Pursuant to these agreements, management authority over specific programs and services is transferred from the BIA to Indian tribal governments. In turn, each participating tribal government is allowed to redesign and operate those programs and services with minimal regulation and BIA involvement.

I have received numerous letters from self-governance tribes endorsing permanent self-governance legislation. These letters include examples of the many positive effects that tribes have experienced under self-governance, such as improvements in: education, economic development, law enforcement, tribal courts, forestry, public works, community services, cultural programs, and tribal government operations. In general, self-governance tribes testified before the Committee on Indian Affairs that:

They are able to more effectively design programs and services that meet the needs of tribal members;

Self-governance has made tribal governments more responsive to the concerns of tribal members; and Self-governance has allowed them to be more independent of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Mr. President, for too long the Federal Government has dictated the policies and procedures that govern Federal Indian programs. Self-governance, on the other hand, returns the management and decisionmaking authority to the tribes and gives the tribes the flexibility to design and allocate funding in a manner that each tribe determines will best meet the needs of its citizenry.

There is no doubt in my mind that self-governance has been a success. One of the ways that I measure the success of self-governance is to see how hard the Federal bureaucracy will fight to maintain the old ways. In this instance, and notwithstanding Secretary Babbitt's support of the self-governance demonstration project, the BIA continues to fight for the status quo.

I predict that over the next couple of months between the close of the first session of the 103d Congress and the beginning of the second session, the BIA will do everything in its power to sabotage the enactment of permanent self-governance legislation. Fortunately, self-governance has enjoyed longstanding, bipartisan congressional support. I am pleased to note that Congressman BILL RICHARDSON, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Native American Affairs, recently introduced H.R. 3508, the companion bill to S. 1618. As Congressman RICHARDSON succinctly state:

> The Self-Governance Act was a proposal developed in Indian country by Indian tribes themselves. It is the right direction at the right time. The bill is nothing less than the future of Indian Affairs.

I look forward to working with Chairman RICHARDSON next year to promptly consider and pass permanent self-governance legislation.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support the passage of S. 1618.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the reported committee amendment.

(c) PERIOD OF ISSUANCE.—The Secretary may issue coins minted under this title during the period beginning on May 1, 1994 and ending on May 1, 1995.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, on Tuesday, March 2, 1993, Senator MIKULSKI and I introduced S. 469, the Vietnam Women's Memorial Coin Act of 1994. I am pleased that this legislation has passed the Senate, and accordingly I would like to thank all my colleagues for supporting such a worthy cause.

Military women made many sacrifices on behalf of our country during the Vietnam war. It is the objective of the Vietnam Women's Memorial project [VWMP] to honor and recognize these women who volunteered to serve in the Armed Forces. Passage of the Vietnam Women's Memorial Coin Act provides an opportunity for every American to honor the tens of thousands of women who served during the Vietnam war era by establishing an endowment which would serve as a permanent source of support for the Vietnam Women's Memorial.

As many of you know, the memorial was dedicated in a moving ceremony held on Veterans' Day, November 11, 1993, at the site of the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial. It is the first memorial in the Nation's Capital to pay tribute to women's military service.

The passage of this legislation in the Senate, and ultimately in the House of Representatives, will provide the Vietnam Women's Memorial project with the financial wherewithal to ensure a living memorial. Even thought the memorial to the women who served has been dedicated, the healing must continue.

Many deserve recognition in making this project a reality. One individual, however, is deserving of special praise, Diane Carlson Evans. Through her will and dedication, this memorial was made possible.

Also, I would like to recognize Ms. Gleena Goodacre. Ms. Goodacre, a sculptor from Santa Fe, NM, created the memorial. Her creative vision for this memorial capture the spirit of the woman who served in Vietnam.

I look forward now to the passage of S. 469 in the House of Representatives. I am confident that Congresswoman CONNIE MORELLA and Congresswoman BLANCH LAMBERT will be successful in their efforts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further amendments?

If not, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

TLINGIT AND HAIDA INDIAN TRIBES

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1784, a bill to restore the Tlingit and Haida Indian tribes to the list of Indian entities recognized to receive services from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, introduced earlier today by Senators MURKOWSKI and STEVENS; that the bill be read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; further, that any statements relating to this measure appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place, as if read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the bill (S. 1784) was deemed read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 1784

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. RESTORATION.

The Secretary of the Department of the Interior shall restore to the list, published in the Federal Register on October 21, 1993 pursuant to 25 C.F.R. Part 83, the tribe defined and recognized in the Act of June 19, 1935 (49 Stat. 388), as amended, relating to the Tlingit and Haida Indians of Alaska.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska technical correction bill of 1993.

On April 20, 1993, the Bureau of Indian Affairs published a new list of "Indian entities recognized and eligible to receive Services from the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs." The Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska was not included on the new list.

Mr. President, the first list to include any tribal entities in Alaska was published in 1982. Subsequent lists have been printed by the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs in 1983, 1985, and 1986. The Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska has been on every one of these lists.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs removed the Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska from the list without congressional oversight. The Senate Committee on Indian Affairs held no hearings on this matter and the Bureau of Indian Affairs did not formally present any explanation for the removal of the Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska from the list. This is a significant misuse of Federal department power.

To resolve this problem, on November 18, 1993, during the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs markup of S. 1654, I offered an amendment to restore Central Council to BIA's list. My amendment was accepted by the committee without a single objection. Unfortunately, the Bureau of Indian Affairs has informed my office that the BIA will recommend the President veto S. 1654 if the bill includes the Central Council provision. For this reason, Senator INOUYE and I agreed to strike the central council provision from S. 1654 and introduce a freestanding bill concerning the Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska.

This bill is identical to the amendment that passed in committee by unanimous consent on November 18, 1993.

The bill does not do anything new. The bill makes a technical correction to BIA's list and should not be viewed as setting any precedent for Federal recognition of a tribe. My bill simply restores the status quo of October 20, 1993, by placing the Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska back on the list and restores central council to the same position it was in before it was deleted from the republished list.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS ACT OF 1993

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 312, S. 1654, to make technical corrections to the various Indian laws.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1654) to make certain technical corrections.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs, with an amendment to insert the part printed in italic on page 5, line 5, through page 6, line 9.

So as to make the bill read:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SASSER], for Mr. INOUYE, proposes an amendment numbered 1245.

On p. 6, line 3, delete the following:

SEC. 7. TLINGIT AND HAIDA INDIANS OF ALASKA.

The Secretary of the Department of the Interior shall restore to the list, published in the Federal Register on October 21, 1993, pursuant to part 83 of title 25 of the Code of Federal Regulations, the tribe defined and recognized in the act of June 19, 1935 (49 Stat. 388), as amended, relating to the Tlingit and Haida Indians of Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

So the amendment (No. 1245) was agreed to.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BOND. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I would like to voice my support of S. 1654, making technical corrections to the Northern Cheyenne Indian Water Rights Settlement Act of 1992. These corrections are necessary to clarify the portion regarding the environmental compliance and mitigation.

Due to a typographical error, the correction contained in S. 1654 clarifies that the funds may be spent on the environmental compliance. It is important to stress that the State of Montana remains firmly committed to paying for its share of the compact's implementation costs—totaling $21.8 million. These costs will include mine flooding and agricultural dewatering mitigation which are a part of the construction costs.

It is important that this bill move forward in the legislative process. I would like to thank Chairman INOUYE of the Indian Committee and ranking member MCCAIN for their work on behalf of this settlement.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

So the bill (S. 1654), as amended, was passed, as follows:

REFORMING HEALTH CARE

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, this year, we have seen a great deal of discussion and a good deal of information that has gone back and forth by Members of this body by concerned citizens about reforming health care. I believe there is a general recognition now that while we have the finest health care system in the world today, there are definitely reforms which must be made.

When a person is sick, if they live in another country, if they have a very serious illness, they usually want to come to the United States because we can do a better job of treatment with high technology and skilled professionals than any other country in the world.

At the same time, however, we see the problems in the health care system. We see spiraling costs, which make it impossible for some families to buy insurance.

We see the problems of people who are not covered by insurance. These people often do not get the care they need, and when they do get the care they need, it is usually at the very late stage of their illness when it is more difficult to care for them and it is often in an inappropriate setting.

Finally, we see too much waste in the system itself. There is waste from the paperwork blizzard; there is waste in overly restrictive antitrust regulations; there is waste from malpractice and litigation costs. In addition, we know that people have lost their insurance when they have become sick because companies have chosen to lower their premiums by choosing to avoid insuring those who are sick, avoiding the risk rather than spreading the risk. This has meant that too many families across this country, and I know personally families in my State, who have found with a sudden illness, a severe illness in the family or the birth of a child with significant birth defects, their insurance has been cut off and the family has been put in severe financial straits, if not bankruptcy, as a result of the loss of insurance.

I think also, Mr. President, there is widespread agreement that we have to deal with those problems. I have been encouraged that we have begun a dialog in this body and in Washington and in communities throughout this country on what needs to be done in health care reform.

I intend personally to participate in a number of the summits and a number of the discussions out across the country in the next few months. I know my colleagues will as well. I think we ought to consider the fact that this is a sufficiently important decision that every American should take the time to consider what health care reform will mean, what it may mean to their families, to themselves, and to the country as a whole.

The President, with the very able leadership of the First Lady, has brought forth a major piece of health care reform legislation. In the House, there have been several pieces of legislation that have been introduced, one by Representatives COOPER and GRANDY, that has gained a good deal of attention.

In this body, just the other day, Senator CHAFEE introduced on behalf of the Republican cosponsors the HEART proposal. I am cosponsor of that. There have been other measures introduced by Senators BREAUX and DURENBERGER, by Senator GRAMM, by Senator NICKLES, and others. I think we have the general idea of the framework in which health care reform is going to be discussed. It is my view that we ought to approach this question by saying, first, let us do no harm. If there are areas where the system is not broken, let us not break it. Do not try to fix something that is not broken.

There is agreement on the areas that we should fix. We need to have electronic data information, electronic filing. The President calls it the health security card. I think that can save billions of dollars. We should move forward on that.

With the Senator from Michigan, Senator RIEGLE, I have introduced a measure which will establish the standards, the groundwork, and the privacy and confidentiality standards needed for electronic filing of health care claims, the processing and the paying of them. Ultimately, it will give us better information on illnesses, sicknesses, and the treatment and what works best. It can also help us in the competitive marketplace by seeing who charges too much, where there are people who are doing the treatments, providing the care more efficiently and effectively. That is one part of it. That needs to go forward.

We also believe that competition can do a job of bringing down health care costs. Just 2 days ago I received a statement from a company headed by an acquaintance of mine in Springfield, MO, whose job it is to handle health care claims for small- and medium-sized employers in the area. He has found that by using the purchasing power, getting information from the health care providers, he can hold health care costs down. This is a small company, but it is providing a vitally important role in the competitive market system by pointing out which providers charge too much and getting other providers to bring their costs down. I believe that competition can work. I believe there are examples in other areas where large corporations have purchased health insurance effectively. We know California, North Carolina, and other States are moving forward.

I believe, however, that one of the elements in the President's plan, that of requiring you purchase your health insurance through a monopolies alliance would work against these competitive efforts to see that the purchasers of insurance get the best deal. If we have only one health alliance in the area, and there are penalties imposed on you if you do not go through it, then you can expect the kind of service that you get from a monopoly. It would be like going to the State store in a Communist country; they will take care of you if and when they want to. In our competitive system, voluntary groups working together to provide the best deal for those purchasing health care can make a difference, and I believe we should give it a try.

In addition, I know that many of my colleagues in this body are concerned about the proposal to require employers to provide health care. Most employers I know today who can afford to provide health care do it because it is a very important and valuable tool for recruiting employees. For those who cannot, to tell them that they must provide health care, threatens to cut back on jobs. People are going to hire fewer workers if they have to pay health care insurance. Some small businesses suggest they might go out of business. Economists will disagree whether it could cost 600,000 or 3 million employees. But any number is too many.

I believe that even the system of subsidies, which is a very complicated one and a very expensive one, does not solve the problem. That is why we have been working on a bipartisan basis in a mainstream coalition with Members of both sides of the aisle in this body and both sides of the aisle in the other body to assure that we reform the health insurance market, to assure that we reform the malpractice market, to make sure we have electronic data information, to utilize competition and to make health care readily accessible to all. The way the Chafee-Dole-Bond bill does it, the HEART bill, is to provide tax fairness, allowing everybody who pays health insurance premiums up to the standard amount, which roughly would be $4,200 a year, would get to deduct it. For insurance premiums above that, they would not be deductible. That would pay for making everybody equal, giving them an even playing field in terms of deductibility. For the poor who are not on Medicare or Medicaid or other Government programs or Indian health care programs or native American health care programs, we would make vouchers, vouchers equal to 100 percent of the standard benefit plan, that $4,200 of which I spoke. We would make that available to the individuals who are below the poverty level or at it and enable them to purchase through voluntary cooperatives or choose their own health care providers.

As we develop savings by changes not by ratcheting down the reimbursement for Medicare but substantive changes like bringing in managed care for Medicaid, means testing part B entitlements for Medicare, as we phase those in and only as we phase those in, under the HEART plan we would increase partial vouchers on a declining scale to people 240 percent of poverty. At that time everybody would be required to have health insurance, and there would be a tax penalty if you were above the poverty line and did not have that insurance. That would end the problem of cost shifting, which is a serious problem. Unfortunately, cost shifting is also in part caused by the Federal Government which has ratcheted down reimbursements for Medicare and Medicaid. We need to get rid of the practice of trying to squeeze more money out of providers if we are forcing those costs on to the private pay sector.

But probably the most important thing we need to do in health care is to avoid starting a major new entitlement program that will run out of control.

I note with concern that there are at least four major entitlement programs in the President's health care plan. We all know that the growth in entitlements, mandated spending programs, threaten to drive this country into a fiscal crisis where our budget is totally out of control if we do not deal with it. We need to deal with the entitlement programs like Medicare and Medicaid. But unfortunately, there is a danger as we consider health care that we might replace these rapidly growing entitlements or build on them by adding entitlements for early retirees, for prescription drugs, and for other areas for which we cannot pay.

I am concerned so that I would urge my colleagues, and those who are interested, to look at the statements of independent economists, economists who have taken a look at these financing plans. Many have called them extremely expensive. Some have suggested the cost of some of these entitlements could run anywhere from $70 to $100 to $300 billion a year. That amount would either be added to the deficit which would further push our country toward hyperinflation, degrade our currency or it would require significant percentage increases in the income tax to avoid it.

I believe that we must reform health care. I trust that we can work together on a bipartisan basis in this body next year to come to solid agreements on what we can do to fix that which is wrong. But I hope that we will not make mistakes that break down the system that we have today, or that throw people out of work unnecessarily, or that drive costs through the roof and put our Federal budget further out of control.

Mr. President, 1994 should be a challenging and exciting year, and I look forward to working with my colleagues on the health care reform as we proceed in that year.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been noted. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I might proceed as though in morning business for 3 or 4 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is in morning business and the Senator from Minnesota is recognized and may proceed for 10 minutes.

THE FEAST OF THANKSGIVING

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I appreciate that. I appreciate being here today. I appreciate seeing the President pro tempore in the chair—it's a very pleasant way to end the year 1993.

I am leaving to celebrate the feast of Thanksgiving with my parents. I also celebrate the fact that just this week I discovered that I am going to be a grandfather for the first time. I am feeling very, very grateful in what has been a rather amazing year for me as a person. For a lot of the rest of us, I feel very grateful for the gift of life.

MARSHALL HOUTS

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I came here today because today is a very sad day for me. I have just learned of the death of a very, very dear friend, Marshall Houts, who lived in Dana Point, CA, right near the fire. In fact, he used to have a home just a year or so ago with his wonderful wife, Mary, at Emerald Beach in Laguna Beach.

But I rise to say goodbye, to him here in the Senate, because I have the privilege of this floor, and the privilege of this service. But, I would have traded all of this for the privilege of being Mary Houts and being married to this wonderful Marshall Houts for all the years she was.

Marshall was born an itinerant preacher's son in Tennessee many years ago. Because his parents worked hard to educate their children, he was able to go to the University of Minnesota, and get a good education. He decided that the law was the forum in which he could carry on the same kind of crusade that his father had carried on as a preacher—packing his talents in his saddlebags, and going from town to town bringing the word of the Lord and the benefits of his education to people. Marshall chose to do that in the law, and met his wife, Mary—a young lady from Pipestone, MN—at the University of Minnesota. They married, and he went to Pipestone to practice law, it's a very small town and he enjoyed it a great deal. But the Second World War came along almost immediately. He went into the FBI. He spent his period of time in the FBI in various theaters of operation, and ended up in Burma where he contracted malaria, and came back with the aftereffects of that malaria.

But he also came back with this talent to use the law for the benefit of other people. He also had a talent for writing and for communicating.

He became a special municipal judge in Pipestone, and taught law at UCLA, the University of Michigan, Pepperdine University, and University of California—Irvine.

One of the key chances that came along in his life was to work with the late, great Erle Stanley Gardner. For those who are old enough in this Chamber, and I may be the only one—perhaps the President pro tempore also remembers the beginning of television and the near-miraculous opportunity TV gave us to see and do things that we could not do otherwise—Erle Stanley Gardner brought us his truly classic version of the "whodunit." But he also spread the opportunity to have cases resolved to a lot of people dealing with very difficult cases.

Marshall Houts was a principal researcher, for Gardner's "Court of Last Resort"—the man behind the legend. That's where he picked up his interest in medical pathology. He has written 35 books and 150 articles on medical-legal pathology, and at the time of his death was probably the preeminent expert in this country on medical-legal issues.

Among his notable works are "Lawyers Guide to Medical Proof," "Courtroom Medicine," "Courtroom Toxicology" (6 vols.), "Providing Medical Diagnosis and Prognosis" (12 vols.), "The Art of Advocacy: Cross-examination of Medical Witnesses." and "How They Judged Him: The Legal Trials of Jesus." He also co-wrote former Minnesota Governor Harold Stassen's "Eisenhower: Turning the World Toward Peace."

In the latter part of his life, he and Mary raised 7 children. They were extremely happy with those children. The children bore them grandchildren, and they became friends to all of the rest of us. And in some of my times of trial I personally have had over the last 4 years, he is probably my best friend. He would react to what we saw on TV and read in the papers, and he would send me these extremely sincere and helpful message slips.

He was never happy with my lawyers. He always thought my lawyers were not giving me my money's worth. He would send me critiques once he got a FAX machine.

His son told me that over the weekend as he was dying of leukemia—which for some period of time he thought might have been related to his malaria—at one point when he was delirious he said, "Don't let them do that to Dave. Don't let them do that to Dave. Let David reduce his bill. Let Dave do his thing." He was committed to what he knew I knew about health care reform and how involved I was in it, and somehow he saw some of the trials in my life as an impediment to getting that done.

I appreciate that being among his last lucid or other thoughts, because it was so typical of Marshall Houts and everything that he did in his life. He lived for other people. He reached as many people as he possibly could and in as many ways as he possibly could.

It came as a shock to me and to his many other friends in Minnesota and around this Nation that the Lord chose to take him now and to take him so quickly.

We miss him deeply. We share with his wife, Mary, and with all of his children, with his many friends that loss as our way of guaranteeing that we will remember in our lives what Marshall Houts taught us.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, we are now prepared to conclude business in the Senate for today and but for a formal act on Friday for the year.

Much has been said about what we have done, but I want to say before leaving that I genuinely appreciate the cooperation and patience of all Senators with the difficult demands which the legislative schedule has imposed this year. I hope all Senators will enjoy the Thanksgiving holiday with their families and then return in January refreshed and ready to proceed with what I know will be an important agenda of business, including health care reform and other measures.

Finally, I want to say that, as always, it has been a great personal pleasure for me to have worked with my friend, the distinguished Republican leader, Senator DOLE. As he said a short time ago on the Senate floor, we often disagree, but never once has it been personally disagreeable. As the distinguished Presiding Officer knows himself, having been a leader for much longer than either Senator DOLE or I, it is imperative that there be a relationship of trust between the leaders. Otherwise, the Senate could not function, or could function only with much greater difficulty than is the case.

So I thank the Republican leader for his courtesy, his cooperation, and the fact that where we have disagreed—and that has been often, there is no masking that fact—it has been on principle and issues, and never in a way to undermine or break the relationship of trust which is so essential for leaders in this institution.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me thank the Presiding Officer for all his help and encouragement over the years, particularly this year. It has been a difficult year, particularly with some of the issues coming from the Appropriations Committee, and also for the many statements he has made on the floor, and for his continued concern about the Senate as an institution.

I want to repeat what I said earlier. I think the leaders must get along. Otherwise, nothing would happen, and as we mentioned gridlock, you have deadlock, or something worse.

So I have enjoyed, and always have, working with the leaders on the other side of the aisle, with the distinguished President pro tempore, and now with Senator MITCHELL. We have to trust each other. We have to have private meetings where it does not go outside of the room, because otherwise the work of the Senate would not be completed. We have had disagreements. That is the nature of this place, and we have different views on different issues, and different philosophies in some cases when it comes to parties. But I believe we have moved fairly well this year. Maybe it was a rocky start, but I think we have moved fairly well.

I put in the RECORD the other day how many nominations have been cleared and how many bills passed. It is a good record. We have worked hard at it. The Senate has worked hard. In addition to thanking the majority leader, I thank all of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for their patience, and I apologize for their frustrations from time to time with the leadership, on both sides, I assume.

JIM WHITTINGHILL

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, in the remarks I made earlier regarding those who were helpful on the Brady bill, I omitted the name of Jim Whittinghill. I want the RECORD to reflect recognition of his outstanding efforts to bring this matter to a conclusion.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, one concluding remark—10 months ago, when we began this session, the Presiding Officer was in the chair. It is fitting and appropriate that the distinguished President pro tempore of the Senate, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, former minority leader, former majority leader, and clearly the person most knowledgeable about and most identified with the U.S. Senate be in the chair as we conclude this session.

I know the distinguished chairman will not mind my encouraging Senators to include in their reading plan for the recess period the truly remarkable series of 14 statements which the President pro tempore delivered on the floor of the Senate through the course of the year on the origins of a large part of what we know as democracy and the roots of the concept of separation of powers.

I have read each of the 14 twice, and I marvel at the knowledge and wisdom which went into those statements. In fact, I think it is the kind of thing every American should read to give us some understanding and appreciation of what we have in this country. We are the most fortunate people ever to have lived to be American citizens of the most free, open, and just society in all of human history; and all Americans would do well to gain a better appreciation of that by reading the series of lectures by the distinguished President pro tempore.

I will say, finally, we do work very hard and we did get a lot done. I know I speak not only for the distinguished Republican leader and the President pro tempore, but for every single Member of this Senate in saying there can be no greater honor in a representative democracy than serving in this institution. It is the highest honor and the privilege of my life, and I believe every Senator feels that and believes that. Our obligation now is to follow on the efforts of this first session with the second session, which will justify our heritage and our obligation.

ORDERS FOR NOVEMBER 26, 1993

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until Friday, November 26, at 1 p.m., unless the Senate has, by that time, been notified that the House has concurred in the Senate amendment to House concurrent resolution 190 and has adjourned sine die, in which case the Senate is considered adjourned sine die until January 25, 1994, as under the previous order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Hearing no objection, the request is agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand adjourned as under the previous order.

There being no objection, The Senate, at 3:07 p.m., adjourned until Friday, November 26, 1993, at 1 p.m.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE

Under the previous order, and in accordance with the provisions of House Concurrent Resolution 190, the Senate adjourned sine die.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Friday, November 26, 1993

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

In this season of thanksgiving, we pray, O God, that we would continue the days ahead in the spirit of gratitude and praise for Your gifts to us. For us and for our Nation we know that if we have no vision, we will perish; if we have no faith, we will be consumed by doubt; if we have no hope, life will lose all meaning and days will be empty; if we have no love, we will never know the joy and satisfaction of sharing and caring, of affection and understanding. May the spirit of this season of thanksgiving abound in our hearts and all we do, now and evermore. Amen.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

H.R. 3650

HON. BILL RICHARDSON

OF NEW MEXICO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, November 26, 1993

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, after the Senate passed a 120-day extension of the moratorium on the implementation of the regulations for the Nutritional Labeling and Education Act on November 20, I assumed the House would follow suit and provide additional time to legislate a comprehensive dietary supplements bill. I am sorry to report that my assumption was wrong.

The Hatch-Richardson bill, H.R. 1709/S. 784, has been the subject of over 24 hours of scrutiny and careful examination in the congressional hearings over the past 4 months. The bill introduced on the House floor Monday night, H.R. 3650, the Dietary Supplement Access and Claims Moratorium Act of 1993, has not been the subject of any congressional hearings. Even so, one would assume with so many hours devoted to dietary supplements in congressional hearings this past year, this bill introduced in the last night of the first session would accurately address the concerns of supplement users aired in those hearings. Once again, I am sorry to report that assumption is wrong.

The shortcomings of H.R. 3650 begins with a narrow definition of a dietary supplement. The definition is critical to other sections of the bill. The definition in H.R. 3650 does not provide for the development of future products, thus allowing them no protection against categorization as a drug or food additive. The definition also excludes some products currently on the market.

Section 102(a) of H.R. 3650 prohibits the need for a prescription for dietary supplements on the market now that are not treated as drugs by the Food and Drug Administration [FDA]. However, section 102(a) does not prohibit the FDA from categorizing existing or future products as drugs. For this reason, section 102(a) of H.R. 3650 does not completely dispel concerns about access to dietary supplements.

I am pleased to see the elimination of food additives status in section 102(b) of H.R. 3650. However, the limited definition of a dietary supplement weakens the impact of this elimination.

Furthermore, the attempt to prohibit a dietary supplement from being considered a drug is incomplete because section 201(g)(1) does not protect supplements about which nutritional support claims and health claims are made. Manufacturers should be able to make such claims if those claims are truthful, nonmisleading and supported by the totality of currently available scientific evidence.

Section 102(c) of H.R. 3650 appears to shift to the FDA the burden of proof that a product is unsafe. However, the way the section is written the burden would actually shift back to the manufacturer to product positive evidence of safety if the FDA claims the product is not safe.

Finally, the 6-month extension of the moratorium on the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act regulation is incomplete. This section of the bill leaves the restrictive NLEA health claims proposal for dietary supplements in place. Apart from one approved health claim and one proposed health claim, every dietary supplement with a health claim will not be allowed to remain on the market under this bill. The 6-month moratorium in H.R. 3650 does not in any way direct the FDA to change its highly restrictive view of the standard for dietary supplement health claims.

For all of the reasons stated above, I cannot support H.R. 3650. Now that the moratorium appears set to expire, let's move forward and pass a comprehensive bill that balances the need for consumers to have access to dietary supplements with the need for adequate fraud and safety precautions.

THE HEALTH SECURITY ACT OF 1993

HON. BILL RICHARDSON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, November 26, 1993

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, for far too long, this Nation has been struggling with very difficult problems facing our health care system. Costs have been increasing at well over twice the rate of inflation each year. The number of people without insurance, particularly young children, is disturbing. Obvious and glaring inefficiencies continue to proliferate, especially in the reporting of health claims.

I commend the President for beginning to tackle these difficult problems in the Health Security Act of 1993. I believe the goals he has laid out for health care reform—security, savings, simplicity, quality, responsibility, and choice—are what we should all strive for in any health care reform. The President's plan represents an excellent framework for achieving those goals and that is why I have joined 99 of my colleagues including all of the House leadership as original cosponsors of the President's plan as introduced in the House, H.R. 3600. However, this does not mean that I endorse all parts of the plan.

To reach perfection in the first legislative draft of a health care reform plan is a tall task. I believe there are potential problems with the President's plan that need to be debated and carefully examined.

The employer's share of the costs of individual and family coverage may be burdensome to business owners in spite of subsidies. It may be difficult to keep wages from falling, particularly among the group of employees hardest hit in the past 20 years—blue-collar workers and small business employees. The value of health benefits will not be as evident to them as salary and other benefits.

The formation of health alliances must be very carefully undertaken. Managed care, let alone managed competition, does not have a strong track record in rural areas or traditionally underserved areas. Maximum flexibility must be provided to rural areas to create their own community-based networks of care.

Community health centers and migrant health centers must be given full support to continue to function independent of the alliance system, if need be, and not be inadvertently punished for serving as a safety net. These health centers have served an incredibly important function for people who have had no other recourse to get health care. They can still serve an important function under any new system. Public health must continue to be one of the top priorities of any new health care delivery system.

The financing of any health care reform plan will be carefully scrutinized because of the large transactions involved. Possibly more than any other aspect of health care reform, we must not lose the confidence of the public on the financing of a health care reform plan. They must be confident that any new revenues or additional spending will truly be devoted to health care reform.

In order to enhance accountability, I believe we should consider separating revenues and spending for health care reform from the other parts of the Federal budget. This will help to keep a check on any unfettered entitlements while also keeping public confidence high.

Certainly, health care reform will be a difficult undertaking. Nevertheless, we must tackle the problems of the system and find solutions before those problems become any more intractable. H.R. 3600 places some potential solutions on the table. Some of those solutions would undoubtedly help our ailing system. Other potential solutions, as I have pointed out, could make our system weaker. More debate and discussion is needed on those parts of the President's plan. After all, attempts to reform our health care system should follow one of the primary rules of medicine: First, do no harm.
